INTRODUCTION

These reports are intended for a general, nonspecialist audience. They run the gamut of the arts and sciences, historical and current events, and should provide the reader with useful introductions to given topics. May they encourage a few happy hours of suggestive thought!

It is condemned by sane people for promoting immorality, falsity and corruption, while true believers exalt it as the product of divine inspiration. In the mid fifteenth century, it was the first book printed in Europe using moveable type, and this historical first bears the imprint of Johannes Gutenberg. Originally written in Hebrew over three thousand years ago and copied by hand on papyrus rolls, it is a collection of religious texts and the foundational document of Christianity. With sales of over five billion copies translated into half of the world's languages, it is the best selling book of all time, and has had a lasting impact on Western culture. It is the Christian Bible, and in the twenty first century, this canon of Christian tyranny and superstition has been pushed off the shelves on the continent which first printed it, and replaced by two bibles giving voice and expression to the number one religion, sickness and gutter movement of our time. This movement has replaced Christianity as the voice of the masses, and its popularity in Europe has rung out the last stop of civilization, marked Suicide and Collapse. This religion is called socialism, and is a form of mysticism exalting social groups on earth in place of the Christian God in Heaven as the bearer of rights and the collector of human sacrifices. Its popularity in the West represents the final stage of civilization, when the masses have abandoned reason and the Enlightenment and established a second age of religiousness which seeks to turn back the clock and bring down a new Dark Ages. The new Dark Ages of the twenty first century has adopted two books as its bibles, and these books appeal to the two camps into which socialism has been divided. The mass religion of socialism consists of Marxists, promoting a triple gorgon monster called Gender, Race and Class Politics, and national socialists, promoting Aryan race socialism and antiMarxist nationalism and ethnicism. National socialism was founded by Karl Marx's greatest student, who retained his master's method of viewing man and history through the prism of groups, but substituted racial groups for class groups, and advocated the extermination of enemies of the race in place of extermination of enemies of the class. Adolf Hitler's master race was Aryans and his enemy race was Jews, and these substituted for Marx's master proletariat and enemy bourgeois, as the mass movement of socialism now claimed new victims of Hitler, and between Marxist socialism and Hitler's socialism, drowned the world in an ocean of blood. Socialists in Europe in the twenty first century worship two bibles which express their competing denominations. Expressing the denomination of original Marxism, the first bible is the Communist Manifesto, and expressing the denomination of neoMarxist national socialism is Lord Of The Rings by J. R. R. Tolkien. Listen to them and hear the death bell toll for one thousand years of European history, a history which commenced with the Christian Dark Ages and has concluded with a new socialist Dark Ages. Communist Manifesto. Listen to Marxists proclaim that individuals do not exist and class struggle is the driving force of human history. The class of intellectual workers and entrepreneurs is a class of people who perform no work. Called the bourgeois, it is a class of idlers, thieves and parasites who amass their fortunes by stealing the wealth created by the class of unskilled, muscular laborers called the proletariat. The mind does not exist and reality is constituted of matter in various states of motion. The source of all wealth is collective muscular labor, and the proletarian class of unskilled, muscular, animal laborers is oppressed, exploited, victimized and expropriated by the nonworking bourgeois. The bourgeois system of individual rights and freedoms is crass and vulgar because it reduces human interactions to cash payments. It substitutes economic calculations, money relations and exchange values for the sacred bonds of families and friends. It commodifies people and reduces them to wage slaves. Its offices and factories are manned by proletarian soldiers conscripted and commanded by bourgeois generals and titans, and the laws of matter and machines have decreed that the proletarian slaves will rise up against their bourgeois masters, take over their organizations and exterminate them: "The history of all hitherto existing society is the history of class struggles. Freeman and slave, patrician and plebeian, lord and serf, guildmaster and journeyman, in a word, oppressor and oppressed, stood in constant opposition to one another, carried on an uninterrupted, now hidden, now open fight, a fight that each time ended, either in a revolutionary reconstitution of society at large, or in the common ruin of the contending classes. In the earlier epochs of history, we find almost everywhere a complicated arrangement of society into various orders, a manifold gradation of social rank. In ancient Rome we have patricians, knights, plebeians, slaves; in the Middle Ages, feudal lords, vassals, guildmasters, journeymen, apprentices, serfs; in almost all of these classes, again, subordinate gradations. The modern bourgeois society that has sprouted from the ruins of feudal society has not done away with class antagonisms. It has but established new classes, new conditions of oppression, new forms of struggle in place of the old ones. Our epoch, the epoch of the bourgeois, possesses, however, this distinct feature: it has simplified class antagonisms. Society as a whole is more and more splitting up into two great hostile camps, into two great classes directly facing each other—Bourgeois and Proletariat. The bourgeois, wherever it has got the upper hand, has put an end to all feudal, patriarchal, idyllic relations. It has pitilessly torn asunder the motley feudal ties that bound man to his 'natural superiors,' and has left remaining no other nexus between man and man than pure self interest, than callous cash payment. It has drowned the most heavenly ecstasies of religious fervor, of chivalrous enthusiasm, of philistine sentimentalism, in the icy water of egotistical calculation. It has resolved personal worth into exchange value, and in place of the numberless indefeasible chartered freedoms, has set up that single, unconscionable freedom—Free Trade. In one word, for exploitation, veiled by religious and political illusions, it has substituted shameless, direct, brutal exploitation. The bourgeois has stripped of its halo every occupation hitherto honored and looked up to with reverent awe. It has converted the physician, the lawyer, the priest, the poet, the man of science, into its paid wage laborers. The bourgeois has torn away from the family its sentimental veil, and has reduced the family relation to a mere money relation. Modern Industry has converted the little workshop of the patriarchal master into the great factory of the industrial capitalist. Masses of laborers, crowded into the factory, are organized like soldiers. As privates of the industrial army they are placed under the command of a perfect hierarchy of officers and sergeants. Not only are they slaves of the bourgeois class, and of the bourgeois state; they are daily and hourly enslaved by the machine, by the overlooker, and, above all, by the individual bourgeois manufacturer himself. The more openly this despotism proclaims gain to be its end and aim, the more petty, the more hateful and the more embittering it is." Lord Of The Rings. Listen to fascists declare war on the Age of Enlightenment. Listen to them declare war on reason, science, freedom and modernity. Listen to them promote white European nationalism and ethnicism in the name of traditionalism and the primordial past. Listen to them promote race collectivism and race egalitarianism in place of class collectivism and class egalitarianism. Listen to them proclaim that a pure, orderly and meaningful society is founded upon white racial supremacy and prohibits all social relations, including intermarriages, between whites and other races. A society based on racial equality is a society in a state of moral and biological decline. The philosophy of human progress is the philosophy of fascism which alone recognizes the racial essence of human life and seeks to purge society of racial contamination: "On its surface, The Lord of the Rings is often read as a story about an epic battle between good and evil. But in the decades since it was first published, the series has taken on many different meanings, including for neofascists in Italy who have adopted the tale as a potent symbol of their beliefs. Italy based journalist John Last has spent time researching the links between The Lord of the Rings and Italian fascist movements. He spoke to Tapestry host Mary Hynes about how the Italian prime minister's love for Tolkien is deeply interwoven with her politics. At the heart of the relationship in Italy between the far right and a love of The Lord Of The Rings, is an ideology called traditionalism. What do I believe in, if that's my worldview? So to make it very simple, what traditionalism believes in is this idea of a primordial ancient tradition that is fundamentally opposed to modernity. And so one way of understanding this is that the typical narrative about modernity, about progress since the French Revolution is that it's progress. Like, we've been moving forward; things are getting better. What traditionalism does is it inverts that logic. It says, every one of those steps towards progress—representative democracy, women's emancipation—those are all steps away from this tradition that is really the pure thing that orders society, that gives our lives meaning. And so with that comes this vision of history as one of apocalyptic, long term decline, where we are inexorably headed towards a worse society, where we are getting further and further from that ancient tradition that bound us together. And of course, with that comes racial elements, this idea that there once was a kind of purity to our societies that came from racial homogeny that has been miscegenated [interbred] over time in a way that has made our societies worse. And traditionalism has always kind of been marginal to fascism and to far right thinking in Europe. It's never been the central theme. But one of the things that it's had an outsized influence on is the philosophy of fascism, the way that fascists and neofascists think about their place in the world, think about history, and think about the sort of ideology that their societies are based on." (How The Lord Of The Rings Became A Symbol For Italy's Far Right by Tayo Bero). Europe Today. In 1952 the United States Post Office issued a stamp commemorating the five hundredth anniversary of the first printing of the Bible with moveable type. This was the start of the Gutenberg Revolution and the age of printed books in the West. Featuring spacious margins, miniature illustrations and red ink used for emphasis, the Gutenberg Bible is revered as the most beautiful book in the world. Its outward beauty belies the darkness of ignorance residing within. In Europe in the twenty first century, a movement of socialists, from Marx's socialists to Hitler's socialisists, has issued a new edition of Gutenberg's masterpiece. Rejecting the existence of individuals, it is a bible of mystical gender, race and class essentialism. Its God is Society, colored communist or fascist, and it is Europe's final book rolling off the the Gutenberg religious press.

GERMANY UNDER ATTACK IN THE TWENTY FIRST CENTURY

Berlin, January 5-12, 1919. An armed uprising against the new Weimar Republic is staged by 50,000 Spartacists. Led by Rosa Luxembourg and Wilhelm Leibknecht, this movement of the Communist Party of Germany sought to reverse the November Revolution establishing a liberal democratic society. Communist workers' councils immediately seize power throughout Germany and a Communist People's Republic is set up in Bavaria. In 1923, communists take over the governments in Saxony, Thuringia and the Rhineland. Known as the Bloody Week, the Sparticist Uprising was the starting bell for communist violence against the Weimar Republic and was matched by violence from the communists' brother movement, Hitler's national socialists. Communist violence stopped in 1933 when national socialists assumed power and Hitler became chancellor. In the postwar Federal Republic of Germany, communist violence has returned and blazed through the nation in a whirlwind of terror. From 1970 to 1998, the Red Army Faction conducted a campaign of bombings, assassinations, kidnappings, bank robberies and shootouts with police which claimed the lives of thirty four people, including industrialist Hans Martin Schleyer, Dresdner Bank chief Jurgen Ponto, Siemans executive Karl-Heinz Beckerts, arms industry executive Ernst Zimmermann and West German Attorney General Siegfried Buback. In the twenty first century, the virus of communist violence has continued unabated, claiming new victims by the hour, as it is joined by its brother national socialists, and these two movements have together brought down the autumn and wintertime of German national collapse. In the twenty first century, communist violence in Germany is alive and well and as strong as ever, attracting the adulation of the communist half of the electorate. The communist half sympathizes with the violence, glamorizes the violence, treats its perpetrators as rocks stars, film stars and pop icons, and conceals them from the forces of the law: "The Baader–Meinhof Gang drew a measure of support that violent leftists in the United States, like the Weather Underground, never enjoyed. A poll at the time showed that a quarter of West Germans under forty felt sympathy for the gang and one tenth said they would hide a gang member from the police. Prominent intellectuals spoke up for the gang's righteousness. When the gang started robbing banks, newscasts compared its members to Bonnie and Clyde. (Andreas) Baader, a charismatic action man indulged in the imagery, telling people that his favorite movies were Bonnie and Clyde, which had recently come out, and The Battle of Algiers. The pop poster of Che Guevara hung on his wall, [while] he paid a designer to make a Red Army Faction logo, a drawing of a machine gun against a red star." (A Match That Burned The Germans by Fred Kaplan, quoting Stefan Aust). In the twenty first century, the communist half of the nation has reissued the manifesto of its predecessors and carried on their struggle. Germany Today. The manifesto of the communist half of the nation proclaims that a progressive society vandalizes businesses and attacks the rich. It sets fire to power stations supplying electricity to affluent neighborhoods. It sets fire to radio towers for mobile phone companies and the police. It promotes violence in the name of protecting the environment. It promotes violence in the name of protecting migrant scum streaming through the borders. It promotes violence against the rich because they will not commit suicide and voluntarily die. It defends violence committed by communists while it cracks down on violence committed by fascists. It empowers violent communists while it jails violent fascists. It exalts hammer and sickle hoodlums while it condemns swastika hoodlums. It allows communists to break into the homes of the rich and massacre them. Rejecting the world of reason, liberty and the Enlightenment, it seeks to bring down a savage night ruled by the swine of communist revolution: "Not content with simply vandalizing business premises and launching boycotts, left wing political activists in Germany are taking a step closer to extremism by threatening more direct attacks on ‘the rich.’ Security forces say that groups are operating under the slogan Follow the Money and intend to do damage to the private property of wealthy citizens. Some activists have already proved that these threats are not empty, boasting in an anonymous leaflet—titled Autonomous Blättchen and quoted in Bild—about a 'militant nighttime stroll through' Berlin’s wealthy Grunewald district that resulted in arson. 'We burned a transformer station that supplied electricity to the neighborhood. And we set fire to a radio mast belonging to various mobile phone providers and the police radio.' The sprawling pamphlet points to eco zealotry—accusing the rich, 'who are usually also the powerful,' of leaving 'us and our children a destroyed earth'—and a support for open borders—blaming the rich for 'inciting the population with German passports against socalled migrants.' In a poor attempt at justification, its authors add that since ‘the rich’ 'cannot be overcome with appeals, persuasion, or simple information,' violence is justified. And it is clear that plans are already underway for greater things than the shutting off of power supplies: 'We can break into their living space while they mentally count their dollars, euros, rubles, Bitcoin, or ounces of gold. And we can disappear unseen into the forest with the wild boars in the dark of night.' NieuwRechts editor Daniel de Liever noted that while the establishment media is obsessed with highlighting alleged right wing extremism, 'this is one of those times when you can actually talk about extremism.' Responding to the first attack and subsequent threatening pamphlet, a security official told Bild that left wing politicians had 'empowered' such action, and that 'the left wing extremist scene is becoming increasingly radicalized, propagating class struggle.' " (German Leftists Launch Attacks On Wealthy Citizens by Michael Curzon). Germany Today. The communist half of the nation proclaims that a progressive society is a flaming, raging, left wing extremist group sending forth volcanic explosions of violence. It sabotages capitalist factories and shuts down production. It burns down the pylons and cables carrying the life blood of modern civilization. It commits terror offenses by the thousands and smashes the power grids allowing society to exist. It shuts down industrial parks and the halts the wheels of modern production. It commits acts of violence and destruction in the name of protecting people, labor, natural resources and the earth. It condemns capitalism as a regime of killing machines and monster trucks. It condemns capitalism as a regime of imperialism and colonialism. It condemns capitalism as a regime of mass immiseration. It seeks to destroy scientific and technological civilization in the name of fighting fascism and patriarchy. It burns down Tesla cars and charging stations in the name of the rights of women, nonwhites and the poor. It destroys the electricity infrastructure of the nation in the name of the rights of the oppressed and exploited working class. It seeks to cancel the services of modern scientific and technological progress and plunge the world in the darkness and danger of prehistory: "A left wing extremist group known as the Vulkangruppe has claimed responsibility for sabotaging a Tesla factory outside of Berlin on Tuesday, forcing the facility to shut down production. Power was shut down after a suspected arson attack by a radical German leftist organization called the Vulkangruppe (Volcano Group), which claimed responsibility for sabotaging a high voltage power pylon near a Tesla gigafactory in the Berlin suburb of Grünheide. The German Federal Prosecutor's Office took over the investigation into the attack on the power supply to the Tesla factory on Friday, Die Welt reports, stating that they are looking into potential terror offenses. The paper also states police believe the letter issued by the left wing group claiming the sabotage is genuine. Further, the sabotage was more effective than previously thought, and the Tesla factory is still shut down due to being disconnected from the power grid. The paper notes there is 'massive damage' to the power pylon and power supply—which has also impacted tens of thousands of local residents, as well as the industrial park—won't be fully restored until the end of next week. Police said that the pylon was set on fire, shutting off power at the factory as well as numerous small towns in the surrounding area. A Tesla spokeswoman said that production was shut down and most of its 12,500 employees were sent home, broadcaster NTV reports. Following the power outage, the Vulkangruppe declared: 'We sabotaged Tesla today' in an apparent confession letter seen by the Tagesspiegel newspaper. 'Tesla eats earth, resources, people, labor and spits out SUVs, killing machines and monster trucks. Our gift for March 8th is to shut down Tesla,' the leftist group said. The Vulkangruppe went on to accuse Tesla boss Elon Musk—whom they dubbed Misery Musk—of being a 'technofascist' and said that the shutdown of the gigafactory was a step towards 'liberation from patriarchy.' They went on to call for leftists worldwide to attack Tesla cars on the road, saying: 'Every activist's secret poetry album shouldn't miss a beaten up Tesla. No Tesla in the world should be safe from our flaming rage. Every Tesla that burns sabotages the Imperial way of life.' The far left group has a history of attacking the Tesla site in Grünheide, claiming responsibility in 2021 for another arson attack on high voltage power cables used to power the construction of the factory. So far, no suspects have been identified or prosecuted. Brandenburg's Interior Minister Michael Stübgen said: 'If the initial findings are confirmed, this will be a perfidious attack on our electricity infrastructure. That will have consequences. Here, thousands of people were cut off from basic services and put in danger.'" (Sabotage of Tesla Factory That May Take Two Weeks To Rectify Investigated by German Terrorism Police by Kurt Zindulka). Germany Today. Germany, November 9-10, 1938. Adolf Hitler's SA and SS paramilitary forces conduct a pogrom against Jews. Called the Night of Broken Glass for the shards of glass littering the streets after the windows of Jewish homes, schools, hospitals, stores, offices and synagogues were smashed, this was a night which would be repeated in Germany for the next eighty years. It would be repeated by Marxists of all stripes and varieties, from the original class war Marxists to national socialist Marxists to race and gender Marxists. In Germany in the twenty first century, Marxist violence is writing the nation's last act.

MARXIST MATHEMATICS IN THE TWENTY FIRST CENTURY

Deutsche Physik. Aryan Physics. Deutsche Mathematik. Aryan Mathematics. Promoted during the Third Reich, these pseudosciences were based on the national socialist doctrine that science is a product of race. Trofim Lysenko. Soviet biologist who proclaimed that the notion of genes is a "bourgeois invention" because it posits entities in organisms which are stable and unchanging, and there is nothing stable or unchanging amidst the whirling flux of matter which is reality. He proclaimed that there exist no genes, and organisms change from one generation to the next by direct environmental action, and can be endlessly changed by the environment without the mechanism of genes. There are no genes, no species and nothing which is as it is, but there is only pure change itself, which is expressed in the Marxist philosophy of dialectical materialism, according to which matter A is at once matter nonA. Proclaiming that all science is a product of class, and that Lamarckian antigenetics is true "proletarian science," Lysenko had the support of Joseph Stalin, who proclaimed, "Bravo, comrade Lysenko! Bravo!" The Marxist war against truth, science and the Enlightenment was a scar on the twentieth century and has continued scarring the West up to the present day, for Marxism has since the dawn of the last century enjoyed widespread popular support. Since the dawn of the last century, Marxism has been the number one gutter religion of our time, collecting the human debris of rancor and discontent flowing in the channels of the moral underworld, and forming them into an army and a revolution. Since the dawn of the twentieth century, Marxism in its gender, race, class and Aryan manifestations has been seeking to destroy science and replace it with ideological lockstep and control.

Mathematics Today. In the twenty first century, the successors of the Aryan and proletarian pseudosciences promoted by Hitler and Stalin have invaded mathematics and promoted a Marxist gender, race and class version of Deutsche Mathematik. Listen to their manifesto. They proclaim that progressive mathematics teaches students social justice in place of mathematics. It teaches students race and gender politics. It rejects the teaching of numerical computation because nonwhite students have trouble counting. It rejects standardized tests in the name of helping disadvantaged blacks and hispanics. It condemns objective assessments of knowledge as instruments of white supremacist culture. It gives preferential treatment to black and female students, passing and advancing them without reference to their skills, in the name of diversity, equity and inclusion. It replaces mathematical instruction with antiracist instruction. It replaces mathematical instruction with race based equitable instruction. It replaces mathematical instruction with antiracist activism. It replaces mathematical instruction with antiracist conversations. It proclaims that the notion of an objectively true answer in mathematics is a product white supremacist culture. It proclaims that the traditional requirement that students show their reasoning to the teacher is a product of white supremacist culture. It rejects the traditional mathematical curriculum, instruction and assessments in the name of a new race and gender based mathematics for all. It replaces mathematical instruction with instruction in gay politics, lesbian politics, bisexual politics, transgender politics and indigenous group politics. It replaces mathematics instruction with instruction in black supremacist ideology. It rejects the teaching of algebra in the name of race equity because the abstract character of algebra is too difficult for black students. It replaces mathematical instruction with instruction in wokeism, instructing students that capitalism is a regime of discrimination against women, nonwhites, gays, lesbians, bisexuals, transgenders, illegal migrants and the poor. It proclaims that traditional binary logic, affirming that A is A and contradictions do not exist in reality, is a white supremacist construct and a form of violence against blacks. It proclaims that blacks students should be taught exclusively by black teachers in black schools. It proclaims that traditional mathematical coursework is dehumanizing to blacks because it gives them failing test scores and grades, and they must conduct walkouts and boycotts against it. It proclaims that mathematical instruction must be replaced by instruction in racial justice. It proclaims that blacks students who fail in mathematics must not be held back or given special classes but must be advanced and placed in the same class as successful students. It proclaims that mathematics instruction must be racialized and placed in the service of far left politics. It proclaims that mathematical instruction must be replaced by the condemnation of the police as antiblack terrorists and truncheons of capitaolist oppression. It proclaims that the notion of a single, universal mathematics is a product of the white imagination and must be replaced by instruction in black narratives, black myths, black national socialism and black mathematics: "The Heising-Simons Foundation and similar organizations are supercharging a movement to remake K-12 mathematics education according to social justice principles. The revamp the advocates seek is profound. They reject well established practices of math instruction while infusing lessons with racial and gender themes. The goal is to motivate disadvantaged students while dispensing with the traditional features of math, like numerical computation, that they struggle with on standardized tests–considered an oppressive feature of white supremacist culture. In many quarters, including corporations and universities, diversity, equity, and inclusion programs are in retreat due to pressure from the Trump administration and the courts. Not so in public education, with curricula that are locally controlled and largely insulated from the dictates of Washington. That allows progressive foundations and like-minded charitable trusts to continue to pour millions of dollars into reshaping math education for black and Latino kids, including a $800,000 grant this year from the Heising-Simons Foundation, even though there exists no credible research showing that the social justice approach improves their performance. 'Politicians, and legislatures, even school boards,' are often too 'hamstrung' to get things done, Bob Hughes, the director of K-12 education at the Gates Foundation, said at an online symposium on the need for racial equity policies in America's classrooms. Philanthropy, he added, faces fewer barriers in making rapid changes. The Gates Foundation has been a leader in the promotion of antiracist math instruction. It supported a project called A Pathway to Equitable Math Instruction. The project discards basic tenets of learning, like asking students to 'show their work' and find the 'right' answer as vestiges of 'white supremacy culture.' The pathway is promoted by EdTrust West, which also receives support from the Spencer Foundation, the Heising-Simons Foundation, and other major donors. The Gates and Heising-Simons foundations have both supported TODOS Mathematics for All, an Arizona based organization that calls for elevating DEI practices and antiracist activism into all math instruction, with over $553,750 in grants in recent years. 'We can no longer believe that a focus on curriculum, instruction, and assessment alone will be enough to prepare our children for survival in the world. We need antiracist conversations for ourselves and for our children,' TODOS president Linda Fulmore announced in 2020. Last year, the group hosted an hour long webinar on '2SLGBTQIA+ identity in mathematics education.' During the event, a speaker expounded at length on various queer and indigenous identity groups while spending virtually no time on math related curriculum or instruction. The foundations similarly fund practical lessons that put race at the center of math instruction. In Alexandria, Virginia, for example, the Heising-Simons Foundation supported a public school program that encouraged kindergartners through second-graders to count the characters in picture books by race. At the end of each session, teachers guided students in creating racial scorecards for each book, then voting to select those with the fewest white characters. The exercise was presented as mathematics education. Jo Boaler, a controversial professor of education at Stanford University who championed the push to remove eighth grade algebra from San Francisco's public schools in the name of equity, traces her support to this network of foundations. The Gates Foundation and Valhalla Foundation, which was founded by Scott Cook, the cofounder of tech firm Intuit, have long funded her math education project called YouCubed. These deep pocket donors also fund Danny Bernard Martin, a professor of math education at the University of Illinois at Chicago and a leading voice of what critics call 'woke math.' Over the past six years, the Racial Justice in Early Mathematics Project, which Martin coleads at the Erikson Institute in Chicago, has received nearly $2.5 million from the Heising-Simons Foundation. This year, the foundation announced an additional $800,000 grant to help the project develop toolkits for wider implementation among teachers, administrators, and researchers. Martin's views extend far beyond typical calls for educational equity. He regards mathematics instruction as fundamentally a 'white supremacist construct' that inflicts 'epistemological violence' on black students. In his estimation, even DEI programs are too conservative–mere accommodations 'rooted in the fictions of white imaginaries' and designed to appease 'white logics and sensibilities.' The solution Martin proposes is radical: Black students should seek instruction exclusively from black teachers at 'independent black institutions.' " (Anti Racist Arithmetic? Billionaires Backing Woke Math Doesn't Add Up Amid DEI Rollback by Lee Fang). Mathematics Today. Deutsche Mathematik was the name of a movement and a journal founded in the Third Reich. The journal was founded in 1936 by national socialist mathematicians Ludwig Bieberbach and Theodor Vahlen. The aim of the journal was to promote "German mathematics," to eliminate "Jewish influence" in mathematics, and to promote the doctrine that mathematics is a product of race. In 1944 the journal ceased publication as ominous clouds were gathering over Germany. In the twenty first century, a new edition of Deutsche Mathematik has been published by Marxists. The name has been changed to Gender, Race and Class Mathematics and the target has been changed from Jews to the group of white, European ethnicity, heterosexual, nongender dysphoric males and females who support capitalism. The hate, irrationalism and mental disease have remained the same and composed the final mathematics of the West.

DEMOCRAT STORM TROOPERS ATTACK AMERICA

They were known as the Brownshirts for the color of their uniforms. Founded in 1921, they were critical to Adolf Hitler's rise to power. They provided military protection for Hitler and his entourage, provided military support to enforce Hitler's orders, and sought to stamp out the opposition. They were the Sturmabteilunig or SA and their first major operation was the Munich Beer Hall Putsch on November 9, 1923, an attempted coup in which Hitler sought to take over the Bavarian government. In 1926, 6000 Storm Troopers rallied in Weimar. By 1930, the SA had grown to 60,000 members. In January 1931, the SA had 77,000 members, and in November, 221,000 members. In August 1932, the SA had 445,000 members, and in April 1934, after Hitler assumed power, it had grown to four million members. On May 8, 1945, the SA collapsed into the ashes of the Third Reich and was dissolved along with the Hitler regime of hate, lawlessness and violence. In the twenty first century, the fists, knives and bayonets of Hitler's infamous paramilitary hoodlums are back on the streets and back in business, committing crimes under new flags and new colors. They are back in business in the nation which led the fight against Hitler and a nation exalted as the world's greatest refuge from the storms of tyranny and persecution. They are back in business under the colors and flags of another Marxist religion, a religion represented by triple gorgon monster called Gender, Race and Class Politics, acting in place of its rival, Hitler's monster called National Socialist Aryan Politics. Both are Marxist religions united by their support for tribal politics and opposition to reason, science, liberal order and the Enlightenment. They are back in business targeting the vanishing voices of the Enlightenment in America which are determined to resist and roll back their neobrownshirt onslaught. They are back in business targeting the founding traditions and institutions of America, and a political figure seeking to resist and rollback to any small degree the Marxist cancer consuming those traditions and institutions. They are back in business targeting the rugged, individualist America of the old history textbooks, and the forty fifth and forty second president of the United States seeking to make the old textbooks come alive. Make America great again by making it free again, proclaims Donald Trump to a vanishing minority of antiMarxist Americans. Hitler's brownshirts are back in business under the Marxist rainbow flags and colors of the Democrat Party. Look at what these latter day brownshirts have done to Trump and the vanishing America he represents. The Democrat Party Today. The Democrat Party has nullified the rule of law and replaced it with partisan weapons to jail Donald Trump and destroy American civilization. It has ordered the CIA to manufacture the legend that Trump was a Russian agent in order to sabotage his campaign and administration. The legend was exposed as false by the Robert Mueller Special Counsel Investigation conducted from May 2017 to March 2019. It has ordered a secret, organized group of intelligence officers to manufacture the legend that the information contained in Hunder Biden's laptop, information revealing the existence of a global influence peddling operation run by Joe Biden when he was vice president, was the work of a Russian intelligence operation. It has ordered the FBI to coerce social media platforms to censor news stories exposing this influence peddling operation, and thereby protect Biden's presidential campaign. It has ordered the FBI to invade Donald Trump's home and seize documents which Trump had a right to keep by virtue of Article Two of the Constitution, which makes the president the owner of executive documents: "The executive Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America." It has sought to remove Trump from the ballot in twenty five states without due process of law. It has coordinated local, state and federal prosecutors in a campaign to jail Trump for crimes no other person in the nation has ever been charged with. It has impeached Trump twice. The first impeachment was on charges of abuse of power and obstruction of justice. The first charge was that Trump had solicited interference from Ukraine to help his 2020 presidential campaign. In point of fact, Trump had ordered Ukraine president Volodymyr Zelensky to investigate Joe Biden's influence peddling operation run with Hunter Biden, and threatened to withhold military aid and an invitation to the White House if the operation was not exposed and investigated. The second charge was that Trump had obstructed the House impeachment inquiry by ordering his subordinates to ignore subpoenas for documents and testimony. In point of fact, the president has a right under the separation of powers set forth by the Constitution to maintain confidential communications in the executive branch. The second impeachment was on the charge that Trump had incited an insurrection in the January 6, 2021 attack on the United States Capital. In point of fact, the attempted insurrection was justified because the presidential election had been rigged and the Supreme Court and Vice President Mike Pence dismissed all attempts to achieve peaceful redress. The election was rigged by Democrat couriers who illegally collected and deposited ballots into drop boxes, couriers pinpointed by mobile phone location data. It was rigged by fraudulent mail in ballots: "In the 2020 election, more than 1 in 5 voters who submitted ballots by mail say they did so fraudulently, a survey from Rasmussen Reports and the Heartland Institute reveals." (Survey: More than 1 in 5 Mail In Voters Admit To Cheating In 2020 Election by John Binder). It was rigged by changes made to state election laws by Democrat state officials and judges and not by state legislatures, in violation of Article One of the Constitution: "The Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof." The second impeachment of Trump saw a Senate trial conducted when Trump was out of office, in violation of Article Two of the Constitution: "The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors." The Democrat Party ordered two assassination attempts against Trump. The first attempt was made on July 13, 2024 by Thomas Matthew Crooks: "After the FBI identified the gunman who shot at former President Donald Trump as Thomas Matthew Crooks of Bethel Park, Pennsylvania, CBS News and other outlets reviewed public records that verified that he had previously donated $15 to a Democratic organization via ActBlue. Federal Election Commission records show that the Bethel Park address on the $15 donation, earmarked to Progressive Turnout Project, is the same street address and ZIP code where the gunman lived. Crooks made the donation on Jan. 20, 2021, the same day President Biden was inaugurated. Progressive Turnout Project, the organization Crooks donated to, racks up millions in small dollar donations, but The Washington Post reported in 2019 on criticism of the group for its aggressive and at times misleading fundraising tactics. The group's executive director acknowledged that the fundraising emails can be 'provocative or alarming" but defended the approach to The Post because "we are in a frightening time in our country.' (Did The Trump Gunman Make A Donation To Democrats? Here's What The Records Show by Julia Ingram). The second assassination attempt was made on September 15, 2024 by Ryan Wesley Routh: "Routh first registered to vote in North Carolina in 1988 as a Democrat, according to records provided to FactCheck.org by the North Carolina State Board of Elections. For most of the time Routh was registered to vote, he didn't make contributions to federal campaigns, according to Federal Election Commission records. But, starting in 2019, Routh began making modest donations—totaling about $140—to support Democrats. [In 2020a] He expressed support at the time for independent Senator Bernie Sanders and Representative Tulsi Gabbard, both of whom had sought the Democratic nomination for president that year." (What We Know About Ryan Routh's Political Affiliations by Saranac Hale Spencer). The Democrat Party has ordered America's southern border dissolved and allowed 10 to 12 million criminal, disease ridden, illegal alien rats to permanently settle. It has ordered the establishment of sanctuary cities to protect the rats by shielding them from federal immigration laws, breaking national laws in violation of the Constitution, breaking them in the manner of the Old South. It has ordered tens of thousands of rioters and arsonists to destroy over two billion dollars in property, kill 35 people, attack 1500 police officers, and set fire to a federal courthouse, a police precinct, a historic church and as much of Western civilization as they could: "Does destroying democracy also entail weaponizing federal bureaucracies, turning them into rogue partisan arms of a president? So who ordered the CIA to concoct bogus charges of collusion to sabotage Donald Trump's 2016 campaign, the 2016-2017 transition, and the first 22 months of Trump's first term? Who prompted a cabal of 51 former intelligence officials to lie to the American people on the eve of the last debate of the 2020 election that the FBI authenticated Hunter Biden laptop was instead the work of a 'Russian intelligence operation?' Who ordered the FBI to connive and partner with social media conglomerates to censor accurate news deemed unhelpful to the 2020 Biden campaign? Who ordered FBI SWAT teams to invade the home of a former president because of a classification dispute over 102 files out of some 13,000 stored there? Who tried to remove an expresident and leader of his party from at least 25 state ballots to deprive millions of Americans of the opportunity to vote for or against him? Who coordinated four local, state and federal prosecutors to destroy a former and future president by charging him with fantasy crimes that were never before, and will never again be, lodged against anyone else? Who appointed a federal prosecutor to go after the expresident, who arranged for a high ranking Justice Department official to step down to join a New York prosecutor's efforts to destroy an expresident, and who met in the White House with a Georgia county prosecutor seeking to destroy an expresident—all on the same day—a mere 72 hours after Trump announced his 2024 reelection bid? Who but the current Democrats ever impeached a president twice? Has any party ever tried an expresident in the Senate when he was out of office and a mere private citizen? When have there ever been two near miss assassination attempts on a major party presidential candidate during a single presidential campaign? Who destroyed the southern border and broke federal law to allow in, without criminal or health background audits, some 10-12 million illegal aliens? Who created 600 'sanctuary jurisdictions' for the sole purpose of nullifying federal immigration law, in the eerie spirit of the renegade old Confederacy? Who allowed tens of thousands of rioters, arsonists, and violent protesters over four months in 2020 to destroy over $2 billion in property, kill some 35 people, injure 1,500 police officers, and torch a federal courthouse, a police precinct, and a historic church—all with de facto legal impunity?" (Who Has Been Busy Destroying Democracy? by Victor Davis Hansen). The Democrat Party Today. Ernst Rohm was the Chief of the SA and a longtime associate of Hitler's. After Hitler assumed power, Rohm's SA had grown larger than the German army and struck fear into the hearts of President Paul von Hindenberg and Vice Chanceller Franz van Papen. Stocky, scar faced and criminally inclined, Rohm has found new employment in the twenty first century. Championing the cause of migrants, multiculturalism, and gender, race and class Marxism in place of the Aryan Marxism of his fuhrer, he is the leading attack dog of the Democrat Party.

VEGETARIANS ON THE MARCH

Animal liberation challenges large sectors of the capitalist economy by assailing corporate agriculture and pharmaceutical companies and their suppliers. Far from being irrelevant to social movements, animal rights can form the basis for a broad coalition of progressive social groups and drive changes that strike at the heart of capitalist exploitation of animals, people and the earth. (The Politics Of Total Liberation: Revolution For The 21st Century by Steven Best). Animal rights. Hatred of man. Hatred of progress. Hatred of reason, science and technological civilization. Hatred of freedom, capitalism and the legacies of the Enlightenment. This is the fearsome package of beliefs promoted by vegetarians, and this is the vegetarian declaration of war against human presence on the planet. Vegetarianism is abstention from the consumption of meat and the by products of animal slaughter, and in its severest form is abstention from the use of all animal products whatever, such as milk and eggs. Sane people have known for thousands of years, since the time insane religionists first began advocating vegetarianism, that animals possess no rights. They have known that animals do not posssess minds; they cannot perform the process of abstraction, the process of mentally separating attributes, separating the attribute of three from the perception of three trees; and thus cannot be reasonably said to possess any form of legal or moral entitlement to anything. The definition of man as a rational animal, the identification of the distinguishing human attribute as the capacity to reason, and the consequent impossibility that animals possess rights, is affirmed by Aristotle: "If reason is divine, then, in comparison with man, the life according to it is divine in comparison with human life. But we must not follow those who advise us, being human, to think of human things, and, being mortal, of mortal things, but must, so far as we can, make ourselves immortal, and strain every nerve to live in accordance with the best thing in us; for even if it be small in bulk, much more does it in power and worth surpass everything. This would seem, too, to be each man himself, since it is the authoritative and better part of him. It would be strange, then, if he were to choose not the life of his true self but that of something else. And what we said before will apply now: that which is proper to each thing is by nature best and most pleasant for each thing. For man, therefore, the life according to reason is best and pleasantest, since reason more than anything else is man. This life therefore is also the happiest." (Nicomachean Ethics, Book X, Part 7). Vegetarians Today. Look at vegetarians today and see far left extremists and soldiers dressed in full Marxist regalia march under the banner of animal rights. Marching in every nation on earth, see this Marxist religion commit arson and vandalism against farms, businesses and animal research facilities in the name of animal liberation. See it sabotage hunting towers, hunting expeditions and assault hunters in the name of animal rights. See it attack laboratories in the name of animal rights. See it firebomb universities in the name of animal rights. See it firebomb cars in the name of animal rights. See it destroy barns and their contents in the name of animal rights. See it ignite diesel firebombs at lodges and resorts in the name of animal rights. See it destroy meat packing plants in the name of animal rights. See it commit mass bombings in the name of animal rights. See it form an Animal Rights Militia and spread panic in the streets. See it set fire to restaurants, fur companies and mink companies in the name of animal rights. See it justify violent activities in the name of direct action and earth liberation. See it destroy academic offices and research in the name of animal rights. See it condemn the notion of human rights as "speciesism" and kill people in the name of "antispeciesist action." See it promote ecoterrorism in the name of animal rights. See it destroy agriculture in the name of animal rights. See it destroy McDonald's restaurants in the name of animal rights. See it organize violent protests against human rights, human flourishing and the civilization which protects them, and bury the West in dead bodies and property damage: "The Animal Liberation Front (ALF) is a far left extremist group focused on animal rights. The group originated in the United Kingdom but has a presence in 40 countries around the world. In the United States, ALF has claimed responsibility for arson and vandalism against animal research facilities, farms, restaurants, and other businesses the group considers harmful to animals. ALF emerged in England in the 1970s. British animal rights activist Ronnie Lee was a member of the Hunt Saboteurs Association (HSA) in England, a group that worked to sabotage hunting expeditions. He later formed an offshoot called the Band of Mercy, which changed its name to the Animal Liberation Front in 1976. Lee served three years in prison after his 1974 arrest for a raid on Oxford Laboratory Animal Colonies in Bicester, England, with Cliff Goodman. Upon his release, Lee became press officer of the Animal Liberation Front Supporters Group, for which he was arrested in 1986 and sentenced to 10 years in prison for conspiracy to damage property connected with animal abuse. After his release in 1992, Lee began speaking publicly on his own about animal rights and eventually veganism. ALF's core ideology is built on four basic tenets: free animals from abuse; damage those profiting from the suffering and exploitation of animals; expose hidden cruelties against animals through nonviolent actions and freeing of animals; and take all necessary precautions to prevent harm to animals or humans. Despite this commitment to avoiding harm, ALF's actions have included bombings, arson, and other attacks that have resulted in injuries. In the 1980s and 1990s, several letter bombs and car bombs were attributed to ALF. ALF distanced itself from those attacks and they were later claimed by ALF breakaway groups called the Justice Department and Animal Rights Militia. Both groups allegedly broke from ALF because they sought more direct action, but some researchers believe the three groups maintain close ties and ALF uses the other two to maintain plausible deniability of violent activities. The FBI closely associates ALF with the tactic of arson and accuses ALF of setting fire to several animal research facilities, fur companies, mink farms, and restaurants resulting in losses of more than $45 million during the 1990s. Specifically, a cell of ALF and Earth Liberation Front (ELF) members known as 'the Family' were responsible for a series of fires between 1995 and 2001. The group set approximately 20 fires in Oregon, Washington, California, Wyoming, and Colorado blamed by federal investigators on the Family. The alleged ringleader, William C. Rodgers, aka Avalon, was arrested in December 2005 and committed suicide in an Arizona jail that month. ALF has also released animals from farms and other facilities, such as in August 2003 when ALF claimed responsibility for releasing more than 10,000 mink from a farm in Washington state. ALF allegedly believes it must break 'the unjust laws' that allow the exploitation of animals. Further, ALF justifies violent acts such as arson because they financially hurt those ALF classifies as animal abusers. Between 1995 and 2010, ALF was responsible for 45 percent of 239 arson and bombing attacks recorded by the Department of Homeland security and attributed to environmental terrorists. After the 9/11 terror attacks, the FBI focused its efforts on domestic terrorist threats, while corporate lobbying pushed the government to take decisive action against ecoterrorists specifically. The FBI labeled ALF a domestic terrorist organization and the Justice Department began a campaign pursuing ecoterrorists as the nation's top domestic terrorist threat. In 2009, an ALF spokesman said some members had turned to violence following the failure of years of peaceful campaigning. Following the 9/11 attacks, the FBI ramped up its surveillance and other activities against ALF and ELF. In December 2001, domestic terrorism section chief of the FBI, James Jarboe, called ALF and ELF 'the Number 1 priority in the domestic terrorism program.' In congressional testimony in 2004, John Lewis, deputy assistant director of the FBI Counterterrorism Division, called the investigation of animal rights extremists and ecoterrorism matters the FBI's highest domestic terrorism investigative priority. Individuals affiliated with the ALF ideology continue to organize protests and carry out acts of sabotage and vandalism of animal research, agriculture, and hunting facilities, resulting in thousands of dollars in damage. A November 2004 raid on an animal research lab at the University of Iowa, for example, resulted in $450,000 in damage after ALF released more than 400 animals. In December 2016, ALF members vandalized a fur store in Ontario, Canada. In 2019, ALF members launched a vandalism campaign against McDonald's restaurants in Colorado and Wisconsin. In June 2022, ALF claimed responsibility for sabotaging 26 hunting towers in Belgium." (Animal Liberation Front, counterextremism.com). Vegetarians Today. Do you know that your Führer is a vegetarian, and that he does not eat meat because of his general attitude toward life and his love for the world of animals? Do you know that your Führer is an exemplary friend of animals, and even as a chancellor, he is not separated from the animals he has kept for years? (Neugeist/Die Weisse Fahne, quoted in Medizin im Nationalsozialismus by W. Wuttke-Groneberg). The ranks of vegetarians boast the world's most influential statesmen. Goosestepping beneath the banners of animal rights and the extermination of man, Adolf Hitler is the preeminent face of the vegetarian movement. He is the blazing torch in its campaign of civilizational destruction.

THE MOST DANGEROUS PERSON ALIVE

She is the highest grossing musician in the world and one of the best selling musicians of all time. She has the largest and most devoted fanbase of any musician in history, a multibillion person movement reaching across the world. Her Eras Tour is the highest grossing concert tour in history, and her concert film of the same name is the highest grossing concert film in history. Her accolades form a cascade with few rivals. Five time winner of the International Federation of the Phonographic Industry Global Recording Artist of the Year. Winner of fourteen Grammy Awards, including a record four awards for Album of the Year. Winner of the Primetime Emmy Award. The most awarded artist of the American Music Awards, the Billboard Music Awards and the MTV Video Music Awards. The first individual from the arts to be named Time Person of the Year. Born on December 13, 1989 in West Reading, Pennsylvania to solid, patriotic, middle class Americans, her father was a stockbroker and her mother was a mutual fund marketing executive, spending her holidays at Christmas Tree Farm in Pennsylvania, and attending a Montessori school run by the Bernadine Sisters of Saint Francis, Taylor Alison Swift early in her career caught the fever. This blazing hot mental condition had swept through the West and attacked free institutions. It was contracted from the human bacteria flowing in the sewers of rancor and discontent, sewers which have expanded every year and are presently a synonym and byword of the political and cultural establishment, and it has infected every stratum of society, every walk of life, from street cleaners to pop superstars, and left religious revival tents of mental lockstep in its wake. It is a fever known as Marxism, and its rejection of reason, science, individual rights and the legacies of the Enlightenment has captured the hearts and minds of the masses, and for the past one hundred years has made them write repeal on ballots offering freedom. Taylor Swift has marked her ballots against freedom and in support of the triple gorgon monster of Marxist gender, race and class politics which rules the age by popular acclaim. She has given this number one fever, fire and gutter religion the benefit of her multibillion watt, multibillion audience microphone, with which she has mobilized her global army called Swifties, and shattered the earth with her agitation and propaganda. Listen to the ear splitting volume of her concerts and hear sound waves carrying subversion smash through the windows of every family, home, school, office and business in the world, and toll the death bell of civilization. Taylor Swift. She condemns those opposed to the religion of transgenderism, the religion which proclaims that human sex chromosomes do not exist as human sex determinants and human sex can be changed by a simple act of self indentification. She proclaims that males who claim they are women should be allowed full access to women's bathrooms, shower rooms and locker rooms, and condemns all those opposed to this as hate mongers and voices of unjust discrimination against transgenders: "On Monday (April 8), the songstress donated $113,000 to the Tennessee Equality Project, an LGBTQ advocacy group. The organization has been actively fighting a series of bills in the state, including one that permits adoption agencies to discriminate against same sex couples based on religious beliefs. Another added bathrooms and locker rooms to a list of public places where someone can be charged with indecent exposure. Many believe this 'bathroom bill,' passed Monday in the House of Representatives, will lead to transgender discrimination. A third of the six bills will make it the state's policy to defend marriage as being between one man and one woman. Swift's donation came with a handwritten note to Chris Sanders, the group's leader, which he shared on Facebook. 'I'm writing you to say that I'm so inspired by the work you do, specifically in organizing the recent petition of Tennessee faith leaders standing up against the slate of hate in our state legislature,' she wrote. 'Please convey my heartfelt thanks to them and accept this donation to support the work you and these leaders are doing. I'm so grateful that they're giving all people a place to worship.' " (Taylor Swift Donates $113,000 To Tennessee Equality Project To Fight Anti LGBTQ Bills by Rania Aniftos). Taylor Swift. She advocates the overthrow of modern capitalism because it functions on land stolen from savage cultures by civilized people. She voices her declaration of war in the form of a "land acknowledgement." She advocates the destruction of human freedom and civilization in the name of the First Nations, the Anishinaabeg, Haudenosaunee, Chippewa, Wendat and Aboriginal peoples: "Pop star Taylor Swift opened the latest leg of her Eras Tour in Toronto, Canada, Thursday with a 'land acknowledgment' notice flashed across the giant stage screen, alerting fans that the concert was being held on supposedly stolen territory. 'We acknowledge that we are performing today at Rogers Centre, located on Treaty 13 lands,' the notice on the screen read. 'We acknowledge the First Nations, Inuit, and Metis peoples whose original and treaty territories we stand upon.' The Canadian treaty mentioned in the notice was part of the Toronto Purchase of 1805, which facilitated the British government's purchase of the land from the Native Mississauga tribe where Toronto and the city's Rogers Center now sits. The treaty and land purchase also encompassed the homes of other tribes including the Anishinaabeg, Haudenosaunee, Chippewa, and Wendat peoples. This is not the first time that Swift has opened a concert tour by informing fans that they were standing on 'stolen' lands. According to Billboard, Swift also opened some of her concerts in Melbourne, Australia, informing fans that they were on lands once occupied by the country's Aboriginal peoples." (Taylor Swift Opens Toronto Concert with Woke 'Land Acknowledgment' by Warner Todd Huston). Taylor Swift. She commands a multibillion person global following influenced by her political positions. By her support for Joe Biden and the Democrat Party. By her condemnation of Donald Trump and his campaign to make America great again by making it free again, seeking to roll back the cancer of Marxist gender, race and class ideologies which have spread across it. By her condemnation of Trump's freedom campaign as fascist, right wing, regressive and undemocratic. By her support for transgender rights. By her support for gay and lesbian politics. By her support for illegal migrant scum seeking asylum and refuge in America. By her condemnation of capitalism as an instrument of white patriarchal power: "Although Taylor Swift, 34, avoided discussing Democrats or Republicans in the earlier stages of her career, she has become more politically vocal over time. In 2018, she spoke out against Marsha Blackburn and supported Democratic candidates in Tennessee. During the 2020 election cycle, she endorsed Joe Biden and vowed to the then president Donald Trump on Twitter that 'we will vote you out.' Here, US voters from across the country share what they make of Swift taking a stance on US political issues, what issues they would feel comfortable having Swift talk about, and whether the superstar could influence their vote. 'Could Taylor Swift influence my vote? Yes, absolutely I love that Taylor is getting political! Every American has the right to their own political ideas, and to express them. Taylor has a voice that is all caps, a megaphone. I'd like her to take a stance on women's issues, youth issues, social issues, LGBTQ+ issues, the NFL draft, drug use, or anything else on her mind. Basically, any issue other than those affecting her personal business interests. I think she could, potentially, absolutely change my mind politically, because she is a strong woman who is a role model to my 24 year old daughter and who is unafraid to speak her mind to old, misogynistic, males who can't find the ability to respect a woman, any woman. It is time we prepare the next generation of women for leadership. The far right are scared to death of Taylor, who has an opportunity to move the needle, to politically mobilize particularly young women and men, and I think she should.' Michael Dee, 67, an investment banker from Dallas, Texas. 'Taylor Swift's endorsement can influence me more than any man in DC. She should absolutely take a stance, as much as any American voter! Her stance and/or endorsement is one that I care about as much as my granddaughter does. I would like to hear her speak out in support of human rights for all, especially women. And to support the asylum seeking refugees risking their lives to contribute their hard work to the US. That's what actually makes America great. For me, Taylor Swift's endorsement holds more influence than any man in DC or in the media. Why wouldn't her opinion matter to me?' Louise, 72, an unpaid family caregiver from Florida. 'Her words are a drop in the ocean compared to the Maga machine. I am very supportive of Taylor taking political stances. Country stars have supported Republicans for years and it didn't seem to bother anyone; now a smart successful woman has threatened the football Maga crowd. She's a smart, aware woman and any speaking she does is a drop in the ocean compared to the Maga machine that is everywhere. If she can prevent another attack on our fragile democracy she should please speak up. She'd be a fool not to.' " ('She Could Absolutely Change My Mind': Readers On Taylor Swift's Political Influence by Jedidajah Otte). Taylor Swift. Red Army: the army of Russian communism created by Vladimir Lenin in 1918, whose 35 million members fought to extend the communist slave empire throughout the world. Red Guard: the army created by Mao Zedong in 1966 to carry out Mao's Cultural Revolution to communize China and destroy every last remnant of freedom and civilization remaining in the nation. From 1966 to 1968, twelve million social justice warriors in the service of Mao smashed, burned and killed their way through the nation in a campaign of cultural and physical genocide with few rivals in history. Added to the Oxford Dictionary in 2023, the term Swiftie refers to a member of the largest fandom in history. Comprising one quarter of the world's population, blindly obeying orders from their great leader, chairman, commissar and marshal, and defending the cause of Marxist gender, race, class, migrant and Muslim politics is a movement described as a culture, a metaverse, a universe, social capital, collective effervescence and a passionate community of interest. It is Taylor Swift's Red Army and Red Guard, the most fearsome force of Marxist revolution in history.

STALIN AND HITLER IN THE TWENTY FIRST CENTURY

Eighty six years ago, Stalin and Hitler signed the Ribbentrop-Molotov Pact—an agreement that paved the way for World War II and claimed the lives of millions around the world. Poland was the first victim of German, and later Soviet, aggression. (Polish President Karol Nawrocki). August 23, 2025. The eighty sixth anniversary of a nonaggression treaty between two totalitarian powers, Hitler's Germany and Stalin's Russia. Signed a week before Germany's invasion of Poland, the treaty allowed Germany's invasion without fear of Soviet intervention, and paved the way for the partition of Poland between Moscow and Berlin, and the creation of spheres of influence between the two powers reaching across Eastern Europe. Latvia, Estonia, Finland and Besserabia would be placed in the Soviet sphere, while Lithuania would be placed in the German sphere. Less than a century after the parties, the signatories and the nations of representing different versions of Marxism, representing the Russian, proletarian, hammer and sickle version, and the German, swastika, race version, joined forces and formed an alliance, these versions are alive and well and rule competing spheres of influence across the West. Less than a century after two gutter religions, collecting the human debris flowing through the sewers of rancor and discontent, divided free nations between them, their heirs and successors are hard at work continuing their mission, and subverting the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment. Stalin and Hitler, communism and fascism, class Marxism and race Marxism, are the forces which preside over the violence and disorders of the present day, and have established the final age of the West as the age of war. It is a war for control over the free world, and it is being fought by one side which rejects reason, empiricism, science, capitalism and individual rights and advocates human enslavement to a mystical dogma of the gender, race and class tribalism, and another side which rejects reason, empiricism, science, capitalism and individual rights and advocates human enslavement to a mystical dogma of white European racism, ethnicism and nationalism. These are the latter day voices of Stalin and Hitler and they are the final stop of the train of civilization, the final stop at a station marked The Suicide Of The West. Listen to the voices of this twenty first century, Stalin and Hitler assisted suicide. Stalin's Heirs. Listen to Marxist gender, race and class ideologues proclaim that a progressive society is a censorship society which crushes antiMarxist dissent. It outlaws antiMarxist online speech as hate speech. It outlaws antiMarxist social media posts as stirring up race hate. It jails people who tweet opposition to invasions by migrants who commit murder and advocate the fumigation and burning down of the rat holes where the migrants prepare their murders. It raids the homes of people who post information on the identities of migrants who commit murder. It jails people who post online criticisms of Jew hatred spread by Marxists and Muslims. It jails people who support Brexit. It jails people opposed to the Marxist and Muslim war on the liberal West. It jails people opposed to the imposition of transgender ideology, which proclaims that human sex chromosomes have no relation to human gender, and the latter is arbitrary, subjective and determined by personal feelings and self identification. It outlaws antiMarxist stickers, slogans, posters and thoughts as offensive. It outlaws posters of fascist mass murderers such as Adolf Hitler, while it allows posters of communist mass murderers such as Joseph Stalin and Mao Zedong. It prohibits people from owning books by fascist authors, while it allows people to own books by communist authors. It outlaws fascist hate speech, nationalist hate speech and Hitler's hate speech, while it allows Stalin's hate speech, black power hate speech, feminist hate speech and Muslim hate speech. It prohibits people from publishing or distributing fascist written material, while it allows people to publish and distribute communist written material. It allows Marxists to proclaim that they wish to slit the throats of antiMarxists, while it prohibits antiMarxists from proclaiming that they wish to slit the throats of Marxists. It allows free speech for those who march in lockstep with the political and cultural establishment and allows free speech for nobody else: "The British state has apparently learned nothing from the Lucy Connolly scandal. You might have thought successive governments would want to avoid the international embarrassment of the UK becoming a byword for censorship and crushing dissent. Instead, the figures show that online hate speech convictions have actually increased recently. According to Ministry of Justice data reported last week, convictions for 'publishing or distributing written material intending or likely to stir up racial hatred'—the offense most often used for posts on social media—have soared in the past decade. While there was just one conviction in 2015, there were 44 in 2024. The majority of online hate convictions took place in the last three years. In fact, almost a third of them were in 2024, in the wake of the riots. One of the most high profile and outrageous cases was that of Lucy Connolly, the mother and childminder who was sentenced to 18 months in prison for a single tweet. In the aftermath of the horrific murders of three young girls in Southport, Connolly posted on X that she wanted 'mass deportations' and that people could 'set fire to all the fucking hotels full of the bastards [migrants] for all I care.' For this post—deleted within a few hours—Connolly was handed an almost three-year prison sentence. After serving 380 days, she was released last week to complete the rest on license. Whatever you think of Connolly’s post, the fact remains that she was put in prison for a tweet. And while her case became high profile due to its absurd disproportionality, it is by no means isolated. Right wing activist Samuel Melia was sentenced to two years in prison last year for making and distributing stickers. Melia had been producing digital, downloadable designs featuring slogans like It’s okay to be white, Britons Build Britain, Equality or Quality—you can only have one. Once again, you are free to think what you like about the content of these stickers—they range from the mundane to the crackpot—but, at the end of the day, they are stickers. Serving two years in prison for the ‘crime’ of making offensive stickers is something you’d expect in a third world dictatorship, not a supposedly Western democracy. In Melia's case, it was clear that his actual crime was not the stickers, but his ideology. The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), describing his arrest in 2021, said that the stickers found in his wallet were evidence of 'views of a nationalist nature.' Searching his home, police 'discovered a book by Oswald Mosley' and 'a poster of Adolf Hitler,' which, according to the CPS, were 'key signs of Melia's ideology.' In other words, it was never about the stickers. The charge of stirring up racial hatred was merely an excuse to put a man behind bars for his odious, but perfectly legal, political views. Had Melia or Connolly been on the left of the political spectrum, the outcome of their cases likely would have been very different. Earlier this month, a jury found former Labor councillor Ricky Jones not guilty of encouraging violent disorder after he called for the throats of right wing rioters to be slit at a protest last August." (The UK's Censorship Regime Is Worse Than You Thought by Lauren Smith). Hitler's Heirs. Listen to Hitler's heirs proclaim that a progressive society is a national socialist German society. It is a white populist society. It is a white, ethnic European, race supremacist society. It condemns nonwhite races and ethnicites as mortal enemies of white Europeans, enemies who must be blocked, expelled and exterminated. It condemns Jews as racial enemies who must be expelled and exterminated. It promotes white identity in place of liberal individualism. It seeks to eliminate liberal equal protection under the law by the Arrow Cross of official discrimination in favor of whites. It exalts Europe's indigenous white population as a master race, and seeks to prevent black and brown immigration in order to prevent the replacement the white master race: "More than 70 years after the defeat of nazi Germany, ethnonationalist and white supremacist movements in Europe continue to thrive. They include far right political parties, neonazi movements, and apolitical protest groups. Some groups openly espouse violent white supremacy, while others have propagated their radical stances under the guise of populism. Such populist groups claim that they are striving to protect average hardworking Europeans by preserving their livelihoods and heritages from economic and cultural threats posed by immigrants and ethnic minorities. Though not all of these groups directly link their ideologies to nazism, their propaganda portrays immigrants and ethnic minorities in a similar manner to how nazi propaganda portrayed Jews, blaming them for national economic troubles and depicting them as a serious threat to the broader national identity. Some ethno-nationalist political movements have openly embraced the language and symbolism of the nazi movement. In Hungary, Gabor Vona, the former chair of the far right Jobbik, has blamed international Jewry for attempting to buy Hungary and interfere in its elections. Jobbik has also used the nazi Arrow Cross to symbolize pride in Hungary's nazi past. Les Identitaires and Generation Identity adhere to the identitarian ideology and its Great Replacement theory, which GI describes as 'the process by which the indigenous European population is replaced by nonEuropean migrants.' The conspiracy theory is Great Replacement Theory, which postulates that black and brown immigrants are reverse colonizing the dominant European—ie white Christian—culture in Western countries." (European Ethno-Nationalist And White Supremacy Groups, Counter Extremism Project). Stalin And Hitler Today. August 23, 1939, Moscow. Joseph Stalin and German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop shake hands in the Kremlin after the signing of the Treaty of NonAggression between Germany and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. In the twenty first century, Soviet ideology has spawned a movement of gender, race and class politics, while neoSoviet national socialist ideology has reappeared in the form of white European racism, ethnicism and nationalism. The struggle for power between two communist ideologies is a terrifying play which commenced a century ago. It saw world war and the titanic struggle between Stalin and Hitler. Over the decades, the names and characters have changed but the plot and ideas have remained the same. This is the final play of the West.

TRANSGENDER PSYCHO OPENS FIRE

She kept saying, 'please hold my hand, don't leave me', and I said I wasn't going anywhere. At 8:30 am on August 27, 2025 at a parochial school in the Church of the Annunciation in Minneapolis, Minnesota, during a school wide Mass attended by students and faculty of the school, a man dressed in black approached the church and fired 116 rounds from a rifle through the stained glass windows. The assailant had barricaded the exit doors to prevent people from escaping. The gunfire lasted two minutes and Robin Westman killed two children, aged eight and ten, before killing himself. Robin Westman, twenty three years old, born in Richfield, Minneapolis, had declared war on reality and claimed he was a woman. Denying the existence of genes in the determination of gender, he claimed he was transgender and had changed his gender. Overflowing with rage against reason, sanity, science and common sense, Robin Westman was a posterboy for the number gutter religion of our time. He was an epitome in its most terrifying form of the religion which has collected the human debris of rancor and discontent from the sewers of society and forged them into a movement, an army and a revolution. At 8:30 am on August 27, 2025 at the Church of the Annunciation in Minneapolis, Minnesota, Robin Westman was a Marxist on a mission to kill, and when he died, he left the school he had shot up spattered with the blood of children. Robin Westman. Robin Westman, human rifle who sprayed bullets of Marxist ideological dogmas into the bodies of children, was a dark symbol of the majority, the people on the street, the people in power, the cultural and political establishment, which have together pushed civilization into collapse. Robin Westman. Transgender, gender fluid, nonbinary, symptom of the epidemic of Marxist antiEnlightenment sweeping through the West, shooting, firebombing and setting fire to the voices of freedom: "Minnesota Church Shooting: Trans. Republican Party Firebombing: Gender Fluid. Nashville Shooter: Trans. Colorado Tesla Arsonist: Trans. Colorado Springs shooter: Nonbinary. Aberdeen shooter: Trans. Denver school shooter: Trans. Iowa school shooter: Trans/genderfluid. AMC stabber: Trans. Are you starting to see a pattern here? IT'S AN EPIDEMIC." (Libs of Tik Tok). Robin Westman. Brainwashed himself to deny reality and affirm he was female. Programmed himself to deny that sex chromosomes exist and affirm he can transition into a woman. Wished he was female and dreamed of obtaining state of the art medical intervention to grant him his wish. Blazing in Marxist fashion with hatred of himself and hatred of the world around him, speaking in a language and script disturbed, unstable, and devoid of reason and sanity, he took two children with him through the portals of death: "Transgender mass shooter Robin Westman confessed that he 'was tired of being trans' and wished he 'never brainwashed' himself in a manifesto posted online before he slaughtered two children and wounded 18 more at a Minneapolis church. In a twisted handwritten journal he shared on YouTube before the massacre—much of which is encrypted in a homespun code of Russian Cyrillic script and English words—Westman groaned about his long hair and his decision to transition. 'I only keep [the long hair] because it is pretty much my last shred of being trans. I am tired of being trans, I wish I never brain washed myself,' he wrote, according to a translation by The Post. 'I can't cut my hair now as it would be an embarrassing defeat, and it might be a concerning change of character that could get me reported. It just always gets in my way. I will probably chop it on the day of the attack.' Westman, 23, later wrote that he regretted being trans and just wished he were a girl. 'I regret being trans. I wish I was a girl I just know I cannot achieve that body with the technology we have today. I also can't afford that,' he said. The unhinged shooter also expressed feelings of self loathing. 'I like feeling sexy and cute but my face never matches how I feel. I hate my face. Maybe that's why I like furries so much. You can give yourself a new body and face. I want to be that black face mask on Beyonce's body lmao!' Westman opened fire on the Annunciation Catholic Church and School Wednesday morning while students were praying at Mass, killing two kids and wounding eighteen others before taking his own life. Westman applied to change his birth name from Robert to Robin in Dakota County, Minn., when he was 17 years old, according to court documents. That name change was granted in January 2020. The petition noted that Westman 'identifies as a female and wants her name to reflect that identification.' " (Minneapolis School Shooter Robin

Monster of Marxism who sought to kill Donald Trump because of Trump's campaign to remove the extreme excresences of Marxism such as transgender rights and racist and sexist diversity policies. Monster of Marxism who wrote manifestos of massacre in the strange letters, words and sounds of psychosis. Monster of Marxism, a male who identified as a female and dressed up as a pretty, smart and modest woman on the day he committed mass murder. Monster of Marxism who targeted children and sought to kill as many as he could before he killed himself. Monster of Marxism who killed in the name of Marxist fascism, Marxist hatred of Jews and Israel, and Marxist black politics, brown politics, antiwhite politics, anticapitalist politics, gay politics, lesbian politics and transgender politics. Monster of Marxism who killed in the name of free Palestine, antizionism, trans pride and trans equality. Monster of Marxism who drew gun diagrams and sketches of attack sites for his final, one man war against freedom and civilization: "The deranged gunman who slaughtered two children and injured at least seventeen others at a Catholic school in Minneapolis has been identified as a transgender woman —as disturbing videos posted by the shooter show a handwritten manifesto and 'kill Donald Trump' and 'for the children' scrawled on gun magazines. Robin Westman, formerly Robert Westman, opened fire through the stained glass windows of a church at the Annunciation Catholic School—where he attended —during a celebratory back to school Mass filled with children around 8:30 am Wednesday. Just hours before the massacre, Westman, 23, posted a series of twisted videos on YouTube, which included a manifesto, Minneapolis Police Chief Brian O'Hara confirmed at a press conference. In one 20 minute video, Westman flips through the disturbing handwritten manifesto. Much of it is written in a homespun code that uses Cyrillic characters and English phonetic words. In the deranged writings, he gleefully fantasizes about 'being that scary horrible monster standing over those powerless kids' and reverently confesses admiration for the 2012 Sandy Hook massacre. Westman applied to change his birth name from Robert to Robin in Dakota County, Minnesota when he was 17 years old, according to court documents. That name change was granted in January 2020. The petition added that Westman 'identifies as a female and wants her name to reflect that identification.' But, five years later, he seemed to have backed away from that identity. 'I don't want to dress girly all the time but I guess sometimes I really like it. I know I am not a woman but I definitely don't feel like a man,' he wrote. 'I really like my outfit. I look pretty, smart, and modest. I think I want to wear something like this for my shooting.' His mother, Mary Grace Westman, also worked as a secretary at the school until retiring in 2021, according to a Facebook post by the church. 'I am feeling good about Annunciation. It seems like a good combo of easy attack form and devastating tragedy and I want to do more research. I have concerns about finding a large enough group. I want to avoid any parents, but pre and post school,' another page reads. 'Maybe I could attack an event at the on site church,' he ominously scribbled. 'I think attacking a large group of kids coming in from recess is my best plan. Then from there I can go inside and kill, going for as long as I can.' Near the end of the video, Westman flicks through a number of blank pages before reaching what appears to be a drawing showing the inside of a church, saying 'Haha, nice' as he stops turning pages. He then takes out a knife and stabs into the center of the sketch, his hand momentarily quivering before he withdraws the blade, and quietly mumbles, 'kill myself.' In a video titled 'So long and thanks for all the fish,' Westman slowly turns the pages of the red notebook, which is laid out on top of what appears to be schematic gun diagrams, one of them reading Ruger Mark IV—a type of small caliber pistol. As he flips the pages, an occasional plume of smoke is seen from the bottom of the screen, punctuated by coughs, disjointed cursing, and maniacal giggles. Each page is filled with inscrutable handwritten doggerel, which includes violent ramblings such as 'I have had thoughts about mass murder for a long time. I am very conflicted with writing this journal,' the text, translated by The Post, reads in part. The journal contains a number of other subtle clues about Weston's identity—hinting at an angry melange of far left politics and antisemitism. One page includes a trans Pride flag sticker with 'Defend equality' printed across the bottom, with a black AK-47 sticker laid on top. In another entry, he writes, 'If I carry out a racially motivated attack, it would be most likely against filthy zionist Jews,' before calling Jewish people 'entitled' and 'penny sniffing' before adding 'FREE PALESTINE!' 'I hate fascism,' read yet another page, following it up shortly after with 'I also love when kids get shot, I love to see kids get torn apart.' He later bemoaned the media, saying he is 'tired of the news headlines.' 'They only talk about brown people dying, and I don't care about them. I like to hear when Israelis get killed, but they don't like to report on that stuff,' he wrote. The demented manifesto sheds light on what appears to be a truly disturbed mind, with Weston musing about a grand 'final act'—stating a desire to take out 'a target of political or societal significance' before he died." RED CRECHES SPAWN KILLERS

Military history is filled with children used for fighting. In the early nineteenth century, Napoleon drafted teenagers to fight in his armies. World Wars I and II saw thousands of children fight on all sides. In the twenty first century, children fight in the armies of Mali, Somalia, Syria, Afghanistan, Lebanon, Myanmar, Congo, South Sudan and the Central African Republic. Civilized people condemn the use of children to fight in wars, and the United Nations has called for an end to the recruitment of children as soldiers, but the voices of decency have fallen on deaf ears in the corridors of the Western cultural and political establishment. In the twenty first century, the number one religion in the West, supplanting Christianity as the collector of human debris flowing in the sewers of rancor, rage and revolution, has assumed control over institutions caring for the weakest and most vulnerable members of society, and instilled an atmosphere of license and violence. In the twenty first century, the Marxist establishment running the West has assumed control over daycare centers and encouraged infants, toddlers and young children to kill and destroy. It has encouraged the transformation of children into monsters and written a blank check for juvenile delinquency in its campaign to dismantle the foundations of liberal civilization. It has issued a manifesto for the abolition of punishment and discipline in daycare centers, and for the destruction of mutual respect, behavioral propriety and the process of character formation. Daycare Centers Today. The Marxist manifesto of antieducation and advocacy of supervision as a form of civilizational subversion proclaims that a progressive daycare center does not control the behavior of badly behaved children. It rejects all methods of control, such as isolation and time out, in the name of positive parenting. It allows children to shout, cry, throw objects and play with their food in the name of achieving emotional self expression. It rejects the shaping of behavior through discipline on the grounds that all forms of discipline are antichild. It trains childcare providers to be caterers to children's whims and fancies. It rejects all forms of discipline as forms of psychological violence and humiliation of children. It allows wailing children to keep on wailing without hindrance of any kind and with full encouragement from the care provider. It allows screaming children to keep on screaming without hindrance of any kind and with full encouragement from the care provider. It rejects strict commands, discussions and admonishments to misbehaving children. It encourages impulsive and disruptive behavior among children in the name of accommodating their needs. It rejects helping children to regulate their emotions, and it prioritizes their rages and frustrations. It rejects discipline and punishment as forms of traumatic abuse of children. It encourages disorderly children, telling them they are entitled to be disorderly. It teaches children they can break moral and legal rules with impunity. It encourages the formation of youth gangs and gang wars. It encourages children to be disobedient and difficult to control. It encourages children to bring down destruction, disorder and darkness in the streets. It encourages children to terrorize cities with the torches of arson and drug dealing. It encourages children to steal, wielding guns and knives. It encourages children to disrespect all boundaries and mock all rules. It encourages children to do whatever they please and ignore all forms of authority. It encourages children to exalt passion above reason and lead a life of crime. It encourages children to reject rational norms and responsibilities and worship at the altars of gangsterdom. It encourages children to reject the rule of law, graduate from youth crime to adult crime, run wild in the streets, and storm the ramparts of liberal democracy: "More than 700 educational experts, psychological and doctors have signed a letter slamming the French government's decision to ban punishment in nursery schools and daycares. Last month, new guidelines were released that warn against punitive methods to control the behavior of naughty children, like isolation and time outs. It instead advocates for 'positive parenting,' recommending that childcare providers allow children to shout, cry, throw objects, and play with their food in order to express their emotions. At that age, the document argues, punishing children is basically a useless exercise, and educators should consider it impossible to shape behavior through discipline. Pedagogues who ignore this guidance could end up falling afoul of the law. The rules build on a law passed in 2019, which forbids adults from carrying out 'ordinary educational violence' against children. This includes, as you might expect, corporal punishment like spanking and hitting, as well as 'psychological humiliation.' This is supposed to prevent teachers and other childcare workers from being abusive, but the definition of what exactly counts as 'psychological humiliation' is becoming ever broader. According to the families ministry, putting kids in time out is 'equivalent to psychological violence. You can't calm children down by putting them in a corner.' The 700 experts who signed this open letter disagree—you very much can calm children down by putting them in a corner. They don't put much stock in the government's suggestion that the best way to restore order in a classroom or playroom is to reason with a wailing toddler. Of course, no one is advocating for daycare workers to bring out the cane for misbehaving children. But, realistically, there is only so far you can go in allowing a child to express his emotions before it becomes problematic for the other children. Removing a screaming child from the classroom to calm down is not the same as locking a child alone in a room for hours on end. Nor is giving a kid a stern talking to the same as beating him. This approach is also unhelpful to the naughty child. As the open letter argues, it 'encourages children to give in to their impulses' and teaches them that being disruptive is acceptable and tolerated. It goes on, 'The worrying thing is that this keeps the child in a state of infancy, as if carers should confine themselves to accommodating the child's needs.' Far from helping them to process and self regulate their emotions, it teaches them that their feelings, whims, and tantrums should be the Number 1 priority of all adults around them. Branding any kind of discipline and punishment as traumatic abuse is a recipe for creating entitled, unruly children. This isn't just a problem that teachers and other children will have to contend with. It also has an effect on wider society. It's well established that the children with the most behavioral issues tend to be the same children who come from broken homes and precarious socioeconomic backgrounds. For many of these kids with absent or neglectful parents, nursery and school will be the only places they come into contact with discipline. It is especially important to reinforce the idea that breaking the rules will lead to punishment at a young age—otherwise we risk setting children up to go through life believing that their actions don't have consequences. At the most extreme end of this, we see France's problem with youth gangs. In Greater Paris, police logged 440 rixes entre bandes (gang fights) in 2024, up from 413 in 2023, with six deaths. In Paria proper, there were 17 rixes, leaving 63 injured and two dead. The overwhelming majority of these violent clashes are between teenagers. Multiple towns and cities have implemented curfews over the summer holidays in an attempt to stop wayward teens from wreaking havoc after dark. Obviously, these are not toddlers who are roaming the streets, committing arson, and dealing drugs. The unruly youths who terrorize towns like Limoges or Nîmes do not come from nowhere. Official stats also show that minors (13–17) are overrepresented among suspects for violent theft without a weapon (35%), armed theft (31%), and vehicle theft (28%)—the kinds of offenses where impulse control and predictable consequences matter. The majority of youth gangs proliferate in areas that are socially deprived and immigrant heavy. In Seine-Saint-Denis, a hotspot of gang violence, roughly 31 percent of residents are immigrants. Plaine Commune—the intercommunal authority that includes Saint-Denis—has 69% of its population living in 'high priority,' poverty stricken neighborhoods. 29% are single parent families, and 41% are immigrants. Schools in this ecosystem are also integrating 88,500 newly arrived pupils who do not speak French. While we don't have breakdowns of ethnicity or migrant background when it comes to youth gangs, these figures do show where the state is the first educator—and why predictable consequences in early years settings matter most there. A normal, stable household will be able to pick up the slack where teachers and daycare workers fail, setting proper boundaries and enforcing rules. But what about the child who does not have parents in the picture, or at least, parents who care? One of the very first lessons they will learn from the state is that they can do whatever they please and that the authorities will tolerate it. The last thing any of these underparented kids need is to have their 'big feelings' validated. We can fix the issue of youth crime by banishing would be gangsters to the naughty step. None of this is to say that we can fix the issue of youth crime by banishing would be gangsters to the naughty step. But it's surely a start." (Nobody Puts Bébé In The Corner by Lauren Smith). Daycare Centers Today. They recruited him to fight, and the boy had never even touched a gun. He doesn't know what he's doing, nothing. At home, we never had any sort of guns. Thus speaks Gloria, a mother from Columbia, describing the kidnapping of her child to join the Marxist terror group, the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia. Rejecting all forms of punishment and discipline, all forms of interruption of crying, screaming and violent behavior, in the name of achieving positive education, today's ideologically dyed daycare centers are placing guns into the hands of children and unleashing them on society.

GERMANY DECLARES BANKRUPTCY

It all began with Otto von Bismarck. His enactment of the Health Insurance Act of 1883, the Accident Insurance Act of 1884 and the Old Age Pensions Act of 1889 established the first European welfare state, providing the template for all others, as it instantiated the German national character commanding human sacrifice. In the nation in which socialism was a national religion, in the nation of Hegel and Marx, the Bismarckian welfare state was a natural and logical development. The enactment of the National Unemployment Insurance Act of 1927 under the Weimar Republic continued this development, and the establishment of the National Socialist People's Welfare organization under the Third Reich was its Hitler face. The welfare state. A form of government in which the state robs Peter to support Paul in the enforcement of the mystical morality of social responsibility. A form of government in which individual A is robbed of his rights, freedom and dignity and transformed into an instrument for the support of individual B in the name of the mystical oneness of all people and a mystical entity called Society. A form of government which treats the individual as a means to the ends of others and not as an end in himself, not as what he is, not as a free born agent, but as a passive slave and cog in the machinery of the social organism. The welfare state. A form of government which violates the precepts of the Enlightenment, the precepts of reason, science, sanity and liberal governance, and establishes universal human enslavement in their place. Born under Bismarck in the late nineteenth century, the welfare state is the quintessentially German state, and from the first day of its existence, has been morally bankrupt and a mortal threat to the survival of civilization. Look at this

German invention and see the helix of the German DNA and the shovels of German populism dig a national grave for human freedom. The German Welfare State. See the proclamation that a progressive society is an endlessly expansive vampire state nourished by the blood of the producers of wealth. It is a parasite feeding off honest, hardworking people in the private economy. It is an ever deepening swampland of tax payments and welfare entitlements. It is a lash beating down on the productive forces of the nation. It is a pall of economic recession, depression and stagnation. It funds a national budget which allocates one hundred percent of state revenues to welfare payments. It is a permanent, intensifying discouragement to honest work, labor participation, and economic activity and growth. It is a soaring mountain peak of ever higher taxes and a botomless valley of consumption without production. It is a socialist society and a redistributionist society, seeking to eliminate differences in income, consumption and wealth between the successful and the unsuccessful, the competent and the incompetent, the talented and the untalented, and the producing and the nonproducing classes of society. It is society of collectivism imposed by the ballot box. It is a society of democratically sanctioned expropropriation of wealth conducted in the name of social justice. Created, expanded, funded and preserved by the German people for over one hundred years, it as irremoveable as it is unsustainable, and is a moral and fiscal dead end: "Chancellor Merz has conceded that Germany can no longer sustain its expansive welfare state—a surrender to reality that other nations may soon be forced to replicate. The German welfare state was doomed to fail already from the beginning. The root cause is far greater and much more serious than what the media seem to be aware of. I addressed this root cause eleven years ago, when I predicted that the welfare state would take down Europe's economies. In my book Industrial Poverty, I explain in detail how the welfare state functions like a parasite on the private economy. The more blood it sucks out in the form of tax payments, the more it weakens its host. Likewise, the more entitlements the welfare state pays out, the more it pacifies the productive forces in the economy. As the economy weakens, demand for welfare state entitlements increases. This causes the welfare state to dispense more of the fiscal venom that pacifies the productive forces. In order to cover the cost of the increased doses of fiscal venom, government raises taxes, thus contributing at the other end to economic stagnation. In his foreword to my book, Michael Tanner, at the time a senior fellow with the Cato Institute, summarized my analysis: 'This structural crisis is comprised of three parts: a fiscally unsustainable welfare state, the high taxes needed to pay for it, and work discouraging entitlements that depress labor force participation and lower economic activity.' Germany is a prime example of this structural crisis. Over the past three decades, the consolidated public sector in Germany has run a budget surplus only in eight years. The only reason why a long streak of deficits turned into a few years' worth of surpluses is that Angela Merkel, who was chancellor from 2005 to 2021, relentlessly focused her domestic policy on raising taxes faster than spending increased. She also enforced a budget-balancing mechanism, which put her austerity measures on autopilot, year in and year out. As I explain in my book, this is exactly the wrong policy to address the problem. It works as a small dosage pump of more fiscal venom into the veins of the economy: higher taxes slow down economic growth, which makes more people dependent on more tax paid entitlements, which drains yet more money from the public purse. Over a period of 16 years, i.e., Merkel's tenure as chancellor, this entrenches a structurally unsustainable welfare state so deep into the economy that it is almost impossible to get rid of—especially from a political viewpoint, which is precisely what the Germans are finding out now. According to the few news outlets that have covered this story, Chancellor Merz's announcement likely marked the beginning of heightened tensions within his frail governing coalition. It remains to be seen if the Social Democrats, SPD, can continue to govern Germany with Merz's center-right Christian Democrats. The SPD has a long history of building and expanding the German welfare state, and for obvious reasons: the welfare state is socialist in nature, built on the principle of economic redistribution. Its purpose is to reduce differences in income, consumption, and wealth among the German people. Of the €2 trillion that the German government spent in 2023, two thirds went to the welfare state. This share, which is slightly higher than the EU average, has been largely unchanged since the mid 1990s. This, in turn, is a testament to the high priority that German governments have given to the welfare state over a long time. It also lays bare the root cause of the conflict that now threatens to open a rift in Merz's coalition. But even more than that, the large welfare state is an institutional declaration of purpose: all the legislatures over all these years that have created, grown, funded, and done everything to preserve the red spending programs have done so because they have an explicit or implicit ideological preference for a large, redistributive welfare state. The German welfare state works just as intended: the Gini coefficient which measures income differences in an economy is 17% lower after the welfare state programs have worked their way through the economy. In other words, Germans are 17% more equal in terms of disposable income. This is a sizable impact. It is also the root cause of Chancellor Merz's announcement that Germany can no longer afford this massive redistribution. In so many words: democratic socialism in Germany is about to reach a dead end." (Germany's Welfare Model Has Reached The End Of The Road by Sven Larson). The German Welfare State. See the proclamation that a progressive society gives basic income support to Muslim migrant scum washing over its shores. It is a society lorded over by welfare kings whose crowns are marked Mohammed, Amad, Amed and Achmet. It is a foreign society, a mass immigration society, a network of mosques and a community of the faithful whose members are supported by wealth confiscated from decent, virtuous, law abiding citizens: "Germany's welfare statistics have reignited the debate over migration and integration after new figures revealed that Mohammed and its many spelling variants have become the most common first name among recipients of Bürgergeld, the country's basic income support. The revelation emerged after a follow up parliamentary enquiry by AfD MP René Springer, who demanded clarification of earlier figures published by the federal government. In the initial release, names were listed separately according to spelling, meaning that common variants of the same name appeared much further down the ranking. For example, Mohammad was counted separately from Mohamed or Muhammad. Once all variations were grouped, Mohammed came first, with nearly 40,000 recorded entries across 19 different spellings. That total put it well ahead of Michael (including Michel, Mischa, and Maik) with about 24,600 entries, and Ahmad (including Achmet and Amed) with just over 20,600. By comparison, traditionally German names such as Andreas and Thomas fell back in the rankings, despite their high frequency in single forms. At the end of 2024, 5.42 million people in Germany received Bürgergeld, of whom 52% were German citizens and 48% foreign nationals. In a statement, the right wing opposition Alternative für Deutschland (AfD) accused the centrist government of having initially concealed the fact that Mohammed was the leading name among Bürgergeld claimants. The party said that 23 of the 50 most common names pointed to a migration background and renewed its demand that 'Bürgergeld should only be for Germans' and that 'mass migration into the welfare system must be stopped.' " (Mohammed Tops List Of Welfare Recipients' Names In Germany by Zoltan Kottasz). The German Welfare State. Time: Hitler's Germany. A poster published by the National Socialist People's Welfare organization reads Unterschutzt das Hilfswerk Mutter und Kind, or Support the Charity Mother and Child. The goal of the poster was to drum up financial support for pregnant women, young mothers and children in kindergartens. Winterhilfswerk des Deutschen Volkes or Winter Relief of the German People, an annual donation drive conducted by the National Socialist People's Welfare organization to drum up financial support for the state purchase of food, clothing and fuel for the poor during the winter. The welfare state is the German way of life, and is a portrait of the West in the age of decline.

HIGH SCHOOL REDS MURDER A GENERATION

They are a grim reality in the twenty first century. Increasing every year since the dawn of the century, the numbers are counters of a recurring nightmare. Shattering bodies, minds and lives in a matter of seconds, these are school shootings, and they have transformed institutions of primary and secondary education into hellscapes of mass destruction and mass death. Behind the desks of teachers and administrators sits another killer, and it too has been there since the dawn of the century. Wielding AR-15s marked agitation and propaganda, its bullets have poisoned the souls of adolescents and teenagers and programmed them as Manchurian candidates awaiting orders to spring into action. The rifles used are the most destructive force known in history, and they have blasted into the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment and left the rubble of civilization in their wake. These are the rifles of religion, and their target is the Enlightenment world of reason, science, sanity, human freedom and constitutional government. In the twenty first century, these rifles fire the bullets of the number religion of our time, supplanting Christianity as the world's preeminent sewer flowing with the human bacteria of rancor, rage and revolution, but as determined as its Christian predecessor to plunge mankind into another Dark Ages. These rifles shooting students in high schools today are the rifles of Marxism, and their manifesto of mental enslavement covers every classroom floor and wall in the West. Listen to it and hear the bell toll for civilization's Marxist descent into ignorance and tyranny, succeeding the rule of the Catholic Church one thousand years before, and appearing in the twenty first century at the end of history. High Schools Today. The Marxists in charge of high schools today proclaim that a progressive school is a perpetual motion, political indoctrination center. It is an active, committed communist institution. It is a place of woke education which teaches students that capitalism is a regime of discrimination against blacks, women, gays, lesbians, transgenders and the poor. It is a revolutionary cell dedicated to the bombing and destruction of liberal civilization. It promotes collectivism in the name of the people. It teaches students that individuals do not exist and human history is a succession of tribal struggles along gender, race and class lines. It teaches students that freedom of speech poses a mortal threat to the people's ideology and must be outlawed. It is biased and partisan toward socialist ideas. It teaches students that the notion of objective truth is a bourgeois, Enlightenment fiction and truth is a product of gender, race and class interests. It teaches students the virtue of self sacrifice and the superiority of the Soviet way of life. It glorifies the Communist Manifesto is the holy bible of the working class, and quotes from it chapter and verse. It is a communist labor party. It is a communist gay and straight club. It is a communist student club. It presents liberal capitalist culture as a regime of oppression and exploitation. It teaches students that capitalism is a factory of gender, race and class grievances and conflicts. It teaches students that the traditional values of freedom and the rule of law hamper the liberation of the people. It rejects the liberal curriculum transmitting truth and morality in favor of courses in race studies, ethnic studies, women's studies and African studies. It promotes communist strikes, violence and protest marches. It rejects liberal humanism and universalism in favor of tribal politics, secession and balkanization. It teaches students the virtues of slavery, service and usefulness to society in place of human liberty and human rights. It rejects the traditional requirement that immigrants assimilate and integrate to Western liberal values and promotes a cultural Tower of Babel, discord and savagery. It promotes communist spying, sabotage and subversion of free societies. It promotes Stalinism in the name of democracy. It promotes socialist totalitarian party platforms. It promotes sympathy and understanding for communism. It seeks to detonate bombs of far left populist revolt and vaporize free institutions in mushroom clouds of mental lockstep. It promotes state control over minds, bodies, markets and the means of production. It rejects the open exchange of ideas, suppresses conservative and liberatarian viewpoints, and is an echo chamber for the Marxist views of the staff and the students' parents. It teaches students that the only sound, reasonable and morally acceptable viewpoints are those at the far left end of the political spectrum. It promotes the rainbow flags of Marxist ideologies and sacrifices reason and freedom on the altars of feminist politics, gay politics, lesbian politics, transgender politics, migrant politics, cultural politics, Muslim politics and people of color politics. It promotes the symbols of state power and collective rights, pride flags, people's flags and the hammer and sickle, as it burns the flags of freedom in the public square. It rejects the sounds of liberty resonating across civilized societies, the sounds of natural rights, private property and the right to speak and write without fear of the government, in the name of antiracism, gender equality, transgender rights, social justice, electric cars and reducing greenhouse gas emissions: "In the late 1990s, this writer took a position teaching history, government, and economics in a New York City public high school. After only two weeks, word circulated that I was politically conservative. One of the senior teachers called me aside and, without any prior argument, said, 'Communism is over in the Soviet Union, but it's alive and well at this high school.' Shortly after that welcome, it became apparent that many of the US history teachers were hardcore communists. (This is decades before socalled wokeism.) Howard Zinn's best selling communist textbook was not included on the list of high school textbooks because it was a college textbook, but nevertheless, this cell of commies would regularly copy pages out of Zinn's book, A Peoples' History Of The United States, for distribution to the US History students. The left feels threatened by the First Amendment, which leftists believe takes away from a realistic assessment of life where one is able to see the class struggle as our top social and political priority. [I said] to a leftist colleague that if we promote a particular political ideology in the classroom, we are advancing our bias, not actually teaching. He replied that 'everyone has a bias, so it is better to acknowledge our bias and defend it openly rather than pretend to be more objective.' 'But is it not a teacher's duty to be as impartial as possible in order to communicate with and for all the students?' this writer asked, adding, 'There are a range of personalities and viewpoints in our classes.' To this, the communist colleague replied, 'So what?' At one point, that same teacher who had welcomed me with his poisonous comment about the USSR spent an entire month in his teaching of AP European History explaining and extolling the virtues of the Communist Manifesto, published in 1848 by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels. A group of students complained to the chairlady of the department, but she did nothing. Another member of the cell regularly distributed to students free copies of the newspapers of the Progressive Labor Party. A third member of the cell became the faculty adviser to the Gay and Straight Alliance. A fourth member advised a left wing student political club. In the late 1990s, there were a variety of textbooks so individual teachers could choose to use their preference when teaching. Each of these were written by either one or two authors and attempted to be balanced. Although some were clearly more 'liberal' [Marxist] than others, this writer was able to find one or two that were coherent, informed and relatively balanced and presented America as a unified culture, not as a hodgepodge of grievances, conflicts and unresolved hostilities. However, after only a few years passed, a single US history text was bought for all teachers to use, entitled The Americans. This 1,000 plus page textbook was written by socalled scholars, but they were all from subspecialties of US history. One specialized in geography, another was from ethnic studies, another had written many text prep books, the fourth was an African studies professor, and the fifth specialized in women's history and was the only woman of the group (surprise!). In addition, there was a long list of contributors. Thus, clearly, this was a textbook by committee production coordinated and managed by Holt McDougal, publisher of the volume. It seemed that the book covered every protest march and strike that ever happened in the United States. Thus we have a picture of the country as a divided or balkanized mess." (Pushing Communism In American High Schools by Jeffrey Ludwig). High Schools Today. Graz, Austria, ten people dead. Dunblane, Scotland, sixteen people dead. Winnenden, Germany, fifteen people dead. Since 1999, two hundred people dead across America. These are the victims of school shootings, marking the twenty first century as an age of violence. Teaching students that Western liberal civilization is a racist, white male invention, that capitalism is an engine of oppression and exploitation of women, nonwhites, Muslims, transgenders, native tribes, illegal aliens, minority groups, marginal groups and the poor, and that all the misery and suffering in the world is the bitter harvest of individual freedom, today's high schools are scenes of mass mental destruction, surpassing in lethality the physical shootings of students. Indoctrinated with the rainbow flag and gender, race and class monster of Marxism, their victims are no longer able to think or perceive reality. From grade nine through to grade twelve, their victims look and act human but are machines cloaked in flesh, carrying out an agenda of world revolution.

BOOKS THAT HAVE BURIED THE WORLD

Seventeen kilometers south of the center of Phnom Penh, Cambodia is a memorial. Marked by a Buddhist stupa, it contains an acrylic glass case filled with 5000 human skulls. It is a memorial to a holocaust which transformed a nation into a killing field and claimed one quarter of its population. This nation, this killing field, was the scene of a Marxist genocide perpetrated between 1975 and 1979 in which two million people were killed in a population of eight million. This nation, Cambodia, is now a mass grave for the victims of what was proportionally the worst holocaust in history. In the twenty first century, the world is a mass grave for Western civilization, buried by the bulldozers of religion. The twenty first century has seen history repeat itself and bring down a second Dark Ages, a second age of religiousness, an age which has rejected the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment and composed a coda which has brought one thousand years of Western history to an end. This is how the West has ended, this is how every civilization in history has ended, with the rejection of reason and science and the embrace of belief systems relating humanity to something irrational and supernatural. The preeminent, underlying cause of civilizational collapse, the embrace of religion has appeared in the West in the present day in four forms, marching under four flags. Marked by the rejection of empiricism and by narratives of blind faith, these flags are signposts of cultural suicide and the high treason of the masses. Rejecting the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment, the masses have killed a culture which brought science and technology to their highest stages of development and brought forth scientific and industrial revolutions the likes of which the world had never seen before. In the twenty first century, the masses have constructed four tombstones of the West, transforming the earth into a cultural and civilizational grave. Look at these religions and see the terrifying crucifixion of reason. Look at the bibles composed by the prophets of these religions and see the abuse of writing, printing and publishing in the deployment of words to destroy the mind. Christian Bible. Originally written in Hebrew, Aramaic and Greek, reaching back to the second century BC, and divided into an Old Testamant and a New Testament, the Christian Bible is the best selling book of all time. Listen to the messages captivating five billion people in 800 languages. The central text of Christianity proclaims the primacy of God over natural existence. This God is a contradiction. It exists but is in no place. It exists but cannot be perceived, because man is blind when he perceives and is blind because he has eyes. It exists but is both A and non A, and is everything at one and the same time. It is all powerful and can create something out of nothing, can make two and two equal nine, and can make a triangle have four sides. Its existence is the object of pure faith and not reasoned belief. It is the negation of everything which exists in the world, the negation of consciousness, perception, reason and sanity, and on that account must be exalted as the highest way, the highest power, the highest truth, the highest goodness, the highest justice, the highest comfort, the highest hope and the highest life:

"Jesus looked at them and said, ‘With man it is impossible, but not with God. For all things are possible with God.’" — Mark 10:27

- "So, whether you eat or drink or whatever you do, you should do it all for God's glory." — 1 Corinthians 10:31
- “Taste and see how good the Lord is! The one who takes refuge in him is truly happy!” — Psalm 34:8

- “Jesus answered, ‘I am the way, the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me.’” — John 14:6
- “I’ve said these things to you so that you will have peace in me. In the world, you have distress. But be encouraged! I have conquered the world.” — John 16:33
- "Now, faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen." — Hebrews 11:1
- "For God so loved the world that He gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in Him shall not perish but have eternal life." — John 3:16
- "As a mother comforts her child, so I will comfort you; in Jerusalem, you shall find your comfort." — Isaiah 66:13
- "Our faith can move mountains." — Matthew 17:20
- "For whatever things were written before were written for our learning, that we, through the patience and comfort of the Scriptures, might have hope." — Romans 15:4
- “Jesus said to the Jews who believed in him, 'You are truly my disciples if you remain faithful to my teaching.'” — John 8:31
- “Give thanks to the Lord because he is good because his faithful love endures forever.” — 1 Chronicles 16:34

Communist Manifesto. Written by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels in 1848, the Communist Manifesto is the bible of the number one gutter religion of our time. It is the central text of the largest sewer on earth, collecting the human bacteria of rage, rancor and revolution, and forging it into an army and movement of totalitarian tyranny and mass murder. Listen to the messages captivating the masses throughout the world. Listen to the proclamation that individuals in space and time do not exist and the highest realities are mystical groups. The highest realities are socioeconomic tribes, called the proletariat and the bourgeois. The proletariat consists of animal laborers whose muscles create all wealth and value, while the bourgeois consists of intellectual laborers, such as entrepreneurs, executives, managers, inventors and scientists, who in fact perform no work at all because the mind does not exist, and matter in motion is the sole reality. The idle class of the bourgeois steals the wealth and value created by the proletariat, and the iron laws of matter, muscles and machines have decreed a war to the death between the proletariat and the bourgeois, and the extermination of the bourgeois oppressors and exploiters of the true proletarian working class: "The history of all hitherto existing society is the history of class struggles. Freeman and slave, patrician and plebeian, lord and serf, guildmaster and journeyman, in a word, oppressor and oppressed, stood in constant opposition to one another, carried on an uninterrupted, now hidden, now open fight, a fight that each time ended, either in a revolutionary reconstitution of society at large, or in the common ruin of the contending classes. In the earlier epochs of history, we find almost everywhere a complicated arrangement of society into various orders, a manifold gradation of social rank. In ancient Rome we have patricians, knights, plebeians, slaves; in the Middle Ages, feudal lords, vassals, guildmasters, journeymen, apprentices, serfs; in almost all of these classes, again, subordinate gradations. The modern bourgeois society that has sprouted from the ruins of feudal society has not done away with class antagonisms. It has but established new classes, new conditions of oppression, new forms of struggle in place of the old ones. Our epoch, the epoch of the bourgeois, possesses, however, this distinct feature: it has simplified class antagonisms. Society as a whole is more and more splitting up into two great hostile camps, into two great classes directly facing each other—Bourgeoisie and Proletariat." Mein Kampf. In 1925-1926 the manifesto of a movement founded by Adolf Hitler was published and ignited wildfires of hate throughout the world. Inspired by Marx's method and world outlook, by the view that the highest realities are mystical tribes and not flesh and blood individuals, and that these tribes confront each other as mortal enemies, Hitler's Mein Kampf changes the tribes from classes to races, and advocates a campaign of racial extermination in place of class extermination. Listen to the proclamations of Marx's greatest student, the founder of the neoMarxist religion of national socialism, and hear the progenitor, along with Marx, of the race and gender politics of the present day. Listen to Hitler proclaim that race is the foundation of human existence and human culture. The foundation consists of racial personalities, racial masses and racial numbers in place of socioeconomic class groups. The master race of mankind is the Aryan race, while the chief enemy race is the Jewish race. The Aryan race must exterminate the Jewish race for the sake of the survival and success of civilization: "The Jewish doctrine of Marxism rejects the aristocratic principle of nature and replaces the eternal privilege of power and strength by the dead weight and mass of numbers. Thus it denies the value of personality in man, denies the significance of nationality and race, and thereby withdraws from humanity the premise of its existence and its culture. As a foundation of the universe, this doctrine would bring about the end of any order intellectually conceivable to man. And as, in this greatest of all organisms the result of an application of such a law could only be chaos, on earth it could only be destruction for the inhabitants of this planet." Quran. In the seventh century AD, the central text of Islam was revealed by God to the Prophet Muhammad through God's messenger, the angel Gabriel, and in the twenty first century, its creed of superstition and tyranny has swept into every nation on earth. Listen to the holiest book of the Community of the Faithful proclaim that the highest reality is the God of Abraham revealed to Christians and Jews. Unperceivable, unlocatable, inconceivable and all powerful, this God, this Allah, is the creator and sustainer of natural existence. To this negation of consciousness, perception, reason and sanity, we owe abject surrender and submission: "We believe in God and that which was revealed to us and that which was revealed to Abraham, Ismail, Isaac, Jacob, and the tribes, and that which Moses and Jesus received, and that which the Prophets received from their Lord. We make no distinction between any of them and to him we surrender." (2:136). "ALLAH is He, other than Whom there is no other god. Who knows both what is hidden and what can be witnessed. He is the Most Compassionate and Merciful. Allah is He, other than Whom there is not another god. The Sovereign, the Holy One, the Source of Peace, the Guardian of Faith, the Preserver of Security, the Exalted, the Compelling, the Supreme. Glory be to God, beyond all relations. He is Allah, the Creator, the Evolver, the Bestower of Form. To Him belong the Most Beautiful Names: whatever exists in heaven and earth declares His Praise and Glory. And He is Exalted in Power, the Wise." (59: 22-24). The World Today. In the world today, these four books are the bibles of the masses and have left their claw marks across the face of the earth. Where there are discriminatory diversity, equity and inclusion policies, Marx's and Hitler's books are there. Where there is tribalist gender, race and class politics, Marx's and Hitler's books are there. Where there are Catholic and evangelical antiabortion movements, the Christian bible is there. Where there are Muslim terror attacks, the Quran is there. Where there is civilizational collapse, these books are there. In the world today, at the final stop of the West, these bibles of antiEnlightenment are everywhere.

MARXISTS DECLARE WAR ON WHITES

On December 27, 1929, an announcement was made in the Soviet Union which sent the chill of fear surging through the souls of civilized people. Springing from the pages of Karl Marx, it was an announcement of class genocide. Listen to this first in history: "Now we have the opportunity to carry out a resolute offensive against the kulaks [property owning peasants], break their resistance, eliminate them as a class and replace their production with the production of collective farms." (Harvest of Sorrow by Robert Conquest). Thus spoke Joseph Stalin, who inaugurated a campaign of deportation, starvation and mass murder which claimed the lives of five million property owners on farms. Marxist class genocide continued unabated in the Soviet slave empire. Look at the genocide in Ukraine in 1932-1933: "In the case of the Holodomor, this was the first genocide that was methodically planned out and perpetrated by depriving the very people who were producers of food of their nourishment for survival. What is especially horrific is that the withholding of food was used as a weapon of genocide and that it was done in a region of the world known as the Breadbasket of Europe." (Holodomor, Holocaust and Genocide Studies, University of Minnesota, quoting Andrea Graziosi). Look at genocide in Maoist China, whose Great Chinese Famine in 1959-1961 claimed the lives of 55 million people, perpetrated in the name of collectivization, the people's communes and the Great Leap Forward. Look at genocide committed in Khmer Rouge Cambodia in 1975-1979, which reduced a nation of eight million people to a killing field and a mass grave in which were buried two million people or one quarter of the population. The number one gutter religion of our time, collecting human bacteria from the sewers of hatred, rage, rancor and revolution, Marxism has spawned race and gender versions which changed the original hate objects, and spawned a gender, race and class monster which commenced a genocidal rampage in the 1960s. The most successful race version of Marxism is Hitler's national socialism, which ruled Germany from 1933 to 1945. Look at this neoMarxist campaign of genocide which changed the hate objects from kulaks to Jews: "The nazi persecution of Jews became increasingly radical between 1933 and 1945. This radicalization culminated in a plan that nazi leaders referred to as the Final Solution to the Jewish Question. The Final Solution was the organized and systematic mass murder of European Jews. The nazi German regime implemented this genocide between 1941 and 1945." (Introduction to the Holocaust, Holocaust Encyclopedia). Marxist campaigns of genocide have continued unabated in the twenty first century and have brought forth a world war against whites. The successor of Soviet, Chinese, Cambodian and national socialist hate campaigns, antiwhite racism has assumed the front ranks in the Marxist gallery of violence. Marxists Against Whites. The new Marxist race manifesto proclaims that a progressive society sanctions racially motivated attacks on whites. It speaks to whites in the language of bruises, concussions and racial slurs. It brings criminal charges against whites who assault blacks but not against blacks who assault whites. It stages violent brawls against whites and knocks them down unconscious. It stages riots against whites, stomps on whites and beats them mercilessly with felony truncheons. It silences the opponents of antiwhite racism and banishes them into cultural and media nonexistence: "Last month a white high school student in South Carolina was brutally assaulted by three black teammates at a Fellowship of Christian Athletes football camp. The attack was captured on video and left the victim with a severe concussion and bruises, leaving him likely to miss his senior football season. His attackers accused him of posting a racial slur online; he denies that and there is no evidence to support it. Several students involved now face criminal charges, and the incident’s being investigated as racially motivated, which of course it was. Also last month, a violent brawl occurred in downtown Cincinnati, some of which was captured in viral videos. The incident involved a predominantly black crowd attacking a white man and woman. The man was beaten and stomped on by the cowards, while the woman was knocked unconscious by a black man. Five individuals have been charged with assault, aggravated riot, and felonious assault. It was shocking and clearly racially motivated, but a black Cincinnati Councilwoman named Victoria Parks posted on social media, 'They begged for that beat down! I am grateful for the whole story.' She took some heat for that ugly comment but later doubled down on it, stating 'I wrote what I wrote.' These are just a couple of incidents of a phenomenon that is becoming impossible to ignore, although the mainstream, left wing media pretend it does not exist, because it points an accusing finger at a longstanding reality that everyone with eyes to see is fully aware of, but which it is socially and politically forbidden to discuss. And that is, racism against white people." (The Unprotected Class by Mark Tapson). Marxists Against Whites. The new Marxist race manifesto proclaims that a progressive society discriminates against whites and subjects them to round the clock persecution. It expropriates white lands without compensation. It speaks to whites in the language of holocaust and genocide. It stages rallies against whites and demands the revocation of their constitutional rights. It sanctions the seizure of white property in the name of black economic freedom. It sanctions the shooting and killing of whites in the name of black human rights. It sanctions policies of official racism against whites in the name of achieving diversity, equity and inclusion. It denies whites equal opportunities with blacks in the name of social justice. It prohibits hate speech against blacks but not hate speech against whites. It rejects human universality, promotes race essentialism, proclaims that blacks form a master race, and forces whites to become refugees fleeing for their lives. It is a national assembly of black fascists chanting kill all whites as they vote to repeal Western liberal civilization: "CLAIM: White South Africans—members of the Afrikaner, or Boer, minority group—do not face racial discrimination or persecution by the South African government. VERDICT: FALSE. Major political leaders in the country have called for the murder of Boers to thousands of supporters, and the government recently passed a law that could lead to the expropriation of land without compensation, South Africa born Breitbart News Senior Editor at Large Joel Pollak told Fox News this week. Speaking with anchor Will Cain, Pollak touched on President Donald Trump's recent use of the terms land confiscation, discrimination, and genocide to describe the Afrikaners' plight after a small group arrived in the United States as refugees on Monday. When you look at the statements of leading South African politicians, notably Julius Malema, who held a rally on South Africa's Human Rights Day in March and proclaimed 'Kill the farmer, shoot the farmer, kill the Boer,' that ought to have been taken up by South Africa's judicial system, but the courts decided not to intervene.' Malema, the leader of South Africa's far left Economic Freedom Fighters party and a member of the National Assembly, regularly leads supporters in chants calling to Kill the Boer. On real discriminatory legislation that has been passed, the conservative radio host also brought up how South African President Cyril Ramaphosa signed the Expropriation Act earlier this year, allowing the seizure of property without compensation. Pollak said, 'The South African government passed a law called the Expropriation Act, which allows property, not just farms, to be taken without compensation. And it is circulating regulations that restrict the percentage of white employees that can work in various industries.' So the president [Donald Trumpp] is accurate that members of that group are facing racial discrimination and the threat of expropriation.' Since the US accepted a mere 59 Afrikaner refugees, Ramaphosa called them 'cowardly' and claimed that they do not face discrimination, Breitbart News reported. Cain went on to draw a connection between American diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) ideology to what is going on in South Africa, to which Pollak concurred: 'That is exactly right. I do think there's a strong interest in the United States in this story because of the rollback of DEI. This is the logical consequence of DEI that people are expropriated and denied job opportunities and that they have to seek their opportunities elsewhere. There's also a broader strategic element in all of this. South Africa is an important ally of the United States in Africa, and these racist policies inside South Africa actually make South Africa weaker. We need South Africa to be strong. Racial discrimination weakens a society, any society. We don't want to see South Africa become another Rwanda. We need South Africa to be strong, and hopefully this gets the message across that South Africa needs to reform. By the way, not just a planeload of 59 refugees—70,000 Afrikaners have applied for refugee status. And if nothing else, the American rugby team is about to get a lot better.' " (FACT CHECK: South African President Claims Afrikaners Don't Face Discrimination by Olivia Rondeau). Marxists Against Whites. Racial struggle and the racial will to power. AntiJewish boycotts and book burnings. The Nuremberg Laws and the separation of Aryans and Jews. The Night of Broken Glass bringing the destruction of Jewish synagogues and shop windows. The transition into genocide eliminating two thirds of Europe's Jewish population. This was the world of Hitler's Germany and its terrifying progression of events. In the twenty first century, this world has returned with the names and flags changed. The play is the same. It is a Marxist play and its targets now are whites.

GERMANY'S DARK CHANNELS

Its official name is the Metropolitan Area Outer Underground Discharge Channel, but it is popularly known as G Cans. Located in Saitama, Japan, on the outskirts of Tokyo, it is the world's largest sewer. It took sixteen years to build and when it was completed in 2006, Japan was filled with feelings of pride and wonder. It consists of five concrete containment silos 65 meters high and 32 meters in diameter, connected by 6.4 kilometers of tunnels located 50 meters beneath the surface. It can pump 200 metric tons of sewage per second into the Edo River. Its popular name G Cans stands for the idea that "anything can be done with the ideas and actionable proposals of us citizens." Anything can be done with the right spirit, motivation and attitude. Anything can be done, good or evil, if the will is there to do it. Massive sewers carrying away physical waste to enable civilization to function can be built, and moral sewers submerging civilization in human bacteria can be built, if the desire and commitment are there to build them. On August 31, 2015, German Chancellor Angela Merkel promoted this principle and expressed it as the slogan, Wir Schaffen Das!, or We Can Do It!, in a decision to dissolve Germany's borders and allow 1.2 million unassimilated Muslims from the Middle East to settle in the nation. On August 31, 2015, German Chancellor Angela Merkel issued an order to transform her nation into the world's largest moral sewer. Listen to her words, the most infamous words uttered in German history, occupying page one in the annals of national treason: "I say quite simply: Germany is a strong country. The motive with which we approach these things must be: We have achieved so much–we can do it! We can do it!, and where something stands in our way, it has to be overcome, it has to be worked on. The federal government will do everything in its power--together with the states, together with the municipalities--to enforce exactly that." The moral sewer which is Germany today contains two kinds of bacteria, the first of which has enabled the second to thrive. The first kind has been the number one gutter religion of the West since the dawn of the twentieth century, collecting the forces of hatred, rage, rancor and revolution, and forging them into a movement and an army seeking to overthow the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment. Thus gutter religion is known as Marxism, and by popular acclaim, by landslide votes cast by the German people, it has become a synonym and byword for the German cultural and political establishment. Since the dawn of the twentieth century, Marxism has appeared in many forms. It has appeared in its original proletarian form; it has appeared in Hitler's national socialist form, which replaces the category of class with the category of race; and it has appeared in the form of a triple gorgon monster promoting gender, race and class politics. On August 31, 2015, this monster was invoked by Angela Merkel in the form of a We Can Do It! given to the Marxist doctrine of multiculturalism, which advocates the destruction of Western liberal capitalist institutions by encouraging the settlement of antiliberal and anticapitalist cultures in the nation. It advocates the destruction of Western liberal capitalist institutions by an open borders policy which encourages the settlement of unassimilated Muslims. On August 31, 2015, Germany's floodgates were opened by the Marxist majority led by Angela Merkel, shouting at the top of their lungs along with Merkel We Can Do It! to the invasion and destruction of their nation. Look at what Merkel and her majority have done. Marxist Multiculturalist Germany. For the past ten years, Germany has settled Syrian Muslims bent on subversion. It has allowed entrance to anyone from Syria without vetting or documentation. It has transformed the Federal Office for Migration into a Federal Office for the Settlement of Enemy Aliens. It has refused to regulate the inflow of Syrian migrants. It has encouraged the settlement of unassimilated Muslims from Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iran, Iraq, Somalia, Eritrea and Nigeria. It has allowed more unassimilated Muslims to settle than any other nation in the European Union. At airports and train stations, it has greeted an invasion of young, male, Muslim hoodlums with clothing, food, toys and banners reading Refugees welcome! It has cost the German government 5.8 trillion dollars giving housing, food, clothing, healthcare and personal allowances to migrants. It has cossetted migrants in one of the largest welfare systems in the world. It has given mansions to unassimilated Muslims and dotted the nation with multibedroom houses for multiplying progeny multiplying the ranks of the Community of the Faithful. It has encouraged the settlement of migrants enslaving women as they enslave the human mind. It has encouraged the settlement of migrants who speak no civilized languages, migrants whose only language is that of crime, conspiracy, imposition and control. It has cast a pall of mass terror attacks, mass assaults, mass rapes and mass robberies over the nation and buried it forever: "Ten years ago yesterday, then German chancellor Angela Merkel said what would become her defining catchphrase: Wir schaffen das. In English, We can do it. She was, of course, referring to the open borders policy she was about to foist upon Germany and its people. The invitation was only supposed to be for Syrians, who were fleeing from their country's civil war. Shortly before Merkel's famous speech, an internal communication, Instruction 93605/Syria/2015, had directed German authorities to allow entry to anyone claiming to be from Syria, even without documentation. The official Twitter account for the Federal Office of Migration made a post, intended primarily to inform journalists, that 'regulations for Syrian citizens are not currently, for the most part, being implemented by us.' The message quickly went far beyond the intended audience, and spread like wildfire among the refugee camps of Turkey, Lebanon, and Jordan. It was spread on Facebook groups and passed around in group chats, encouraging migrants of all nationalities—certainly not just Syrians—to make the journey to Germany. Throughout 2015 and 2016, the country welcomed 1.2 million asylum seekers, more than any other EU member state. On average, around half of those applications will have been accepted—again, at a rate much higher than many other EU nations. Among these, the largest group were men between the ages of 18 and 34. Most were Syrians (or at least claimed to be), but many others came from Afghanistan, Pakistan, Syria, Iran, Iraq, Somalia, Eritrea and Nigeria. Germans tied balloons to lampposts, donated clothes, food, and toys, and waited at airports and train stations holding banners that read: Refugees welcome. Some people even invited asylum seekers to stay in their homes. Even at the time, some of Merkel's ministers warned her that she was enabling a kind of 'refugee tourism,' by throwing open the doors to all and sundry. But Merkel dismissed these concerns, boldly proclaiming that 'You will see, in ten years' time, what I do now will be considered historical' Merkel wasn't wrong. Her decision to open the floodgates has certainly proved historical, just for all the wrong reasons. One decade on, has Germany managed with mass migration? It should be clear to anyone with eyes that the answer is a resounding no. On an economic level alone, the cost has been enormous, with estimates putting it somewhere around €5.8 trillion. In 2023 alone, the budget for 'refugee related expenses' was €30 billion. Most of this is spent on social benefits, such as housing, food, clothing, and healthcare, as well as a monthly personal allowance of anywhere between €196 and €441. On average, foreign nationals earn significantly less than Germans do—making it unlikely that the country will ever recoup those losses. Germany's generous welfare system has, unsurprisingly, attracted a large number of opportunistic economic migrants, hoping to cash in. Sue Reid, writing in the Daily Mail last week*,* recounted an interaction she had with a group of three male asylum seekers from Pakistan, shortly after Merkel had given her Wir schaffen das speech. They had 'given up good airport jobs in Karachi to claim asylum in Germany,' Reid wrote. 'With their wives and children, they had been given a five bedroom house.' One of the men said to Reid: 'Thank God for Mrs Merkel. We were fed up with Pakistan.' This obviously sticks in the craw for numerous reasons, but partially because large numbers of asylum seekers have failed to properly integrate themselves into the society that welcomed them so warmly. According to one 2020 study, only 54% of male refugees can speak German at an adequate level. The number is much worse for women, at just 34%. This not only points to a lack of language integration, but also suggests that newcomers are clinging to regressive views of women. Similarly, among those who have been in Germany for at least seven years, 73 percent of Syrian men have found employment. But that drops to just 29% of Syrian women. Crime is another point of contention. There have been plenty of terror attacks and high profile violent acts committed by asylum seekers in the last ten years—from the mass rape of German women in Cologne on New Years' Eve 2016, to the terror attack in Solingen last year. The country's deadliest terror attack in the last decade took place in 2016, at the hands of a failed asylum seeker from Tunisia, killing 12 and injuring 56 at a Berlin Christmas market." (Wir Schaffen Das, Or Not? by Lauren Smith).

Marxist Multiculturalist Germany. Raw sewage poses a grave threat of pollution and contamination of the environment, and civilized societies seek to ensure that it is chemically treated and all pathogens killed. Marching under the banners of We can do it! and Welcoming culture!, Germany's Marxist majority and establishment have established a borderless nation and encouraged a massive influx of Muslim pathogens. The moral sewage they have unleashed has blackened the nation and threatened the security of the West.

MARXISTS AND CHRISTIANS SHUT DOWN SCIENCE

He saw himself at the cusp of a new age. He coined a term for the age receding, a term which would live forever in the annals of civilized people. The term was the Dark Ages, and it referred to the age in which the Christian Church ruled the West, from 1000 AD to 1400 AD. The Italian poet and humanist Petrarch saw reality; he saw the rule of religion as the rule of moral, spiritual and intellectual regression; and he celebrated the coming of the Renaissance, the age exalting reason in place of religion, and blasting the popes off their thrones. Listen to Petrarch describe the pall of mental destruction cast by the Catholic Church: "Amidst the errors there shone forth men of reason, no less keen were their eyes, although they were surrounded by darkness and dense gloom." (Complete Works, 1554). Listen to Petrarch exalt the radiance of reason and describe the sunset of the human mind during the Christian age of faith: "My fate is to live among varied and confusing storms. But for you perhaps, if as I hope and wish you will live long after me, there will follow a better age. This sleep of forgetfulness will not last forever. When the darkness has been dispersed, our descendants can come again in the former pure radiance." (Petrarch's epic poem Africa). In the twenty first century, ghosts from the distant past haunt the West and are bringing it down. History no longer is linear but has become a great wheel, and this wheel has spun round and brought back, after centuries of secular rule, the Dark Ages. In the twenty first century, to the acclaim of the masses and the Western cultural and political establishment, religion has been restored to its early throne and a new age of faith has dawned. This embrace of religion has been a main driver of civilizational collapse throughout history, and in the twenty first century, the West is following in the footsteps of ancient Rome, is growing weary of reason, is growing afraid of reason, is growing threatened by reason, and is committing suicide. In the twenty first century, the West has rejected its ages of glory, its scientific, technological and industrial revolutions, and its Age of Enlightenment which made reason into a systematic philosophy, and has constructed a religious revival tent screaming out with fervor and fanaticism. In the twenty first century, the West has got religion again, and rejected its achievements which made man the master of nature and the knower of the cosmos. In the new age of faith, two religions share power and between them have shut down the house of science. They both are gutter religions, collecting the human bacteria of rancor, resentment, rage and revolution, and forging it into a movement and an army seeking to overthrow the reason based legacies of the West. One gutter religion is the original from the first Dark Ages, while the second has been active since the nineteenth century. Their creed of violence and backwardness is now ascendant in the West and has sent the chill of fear surging through the hearts of civilized people. They see the end coming and they see the two harbingers of the end. They see the gutter religion Marxism and the gutter religion Christianity turn back the scientific progress of centuries and send the West plunging at lightning speed back into its first age. Marxism. Look at the Marxist destruction of science and see the promotion of a new Marxist tribe, alongside of women, nonwhites, gays, lesbians, illegal migrants, native tribes and the poor. This tribe is called transgenders and its members reject the existence of chromosomes as immutable determinants of human gender, and proclaim that gender can be changed. They reject one hundred years of genetic research and proclaim that genes are irrelevant to human gender, and males can transform into females, females can transform into males, and transgender females and transgender males should enjoy legal recognition as real females and real males. See Marxists proclaim that a progressive society seeks to implement a transgender agenda. It sanctions the denial of reality and the empirical methods of science. It sanctions acts of violence committed by individuals claiming to be members of the opposite sex. It sanctions mass shootings in schools committed by transgender psychotics. It sanctions bombings and killings committed by individuals claiming to be gender fluid and nonbinary. It encourages disturbed children to chemically and surgically mutilate themselves in attempt to become members of the opposite sex. It rejects human sanity in favor of imaginary gender bending. It proclaims that individuals pretending to be members of the opposite sex are entitled to enter the spaces, use the facilities and play on the sports teams reserved for real males and females. It proclaims that real males and real females have no legal rights to safety or privacy against invasions by transgender males and transgender females. It proclaims that fundamental, incontrovertible, biological truth must be cast aside by the insane imperatives of transgenderist ideology: "As students file back into classrooms and march onto athletic fields this fall, K-12 schools in blue states across the nation continue to violate President Donald Trump's executive orders halting the dangerous trans agenda in schools. If anyone in America still doubts how insidious this reality denying movement is, they should look to Annunciation Catholic Church School in Minneapolis where trans identified male gunman Robin (formerly Robert) Westman mowed down innocent schoolchildren in a hail of bullets on Wednesday, killing two (ages 8 and 10) and injuring 17 others before cowardly taking his own life. Nor is Westman the first transgender criminal to channel his mental health struggles into mass violence. Libs of TikTok highlighted the disturbing pattern, posting on X: 'Minnesota Church Shooting: Trans. Republican Party Firebombing: Gender Fluid. Nashville Shooter: Trans. Colorado Tesla Arsonist: Trans. Colorado Springs shooter: Nonbinary. Aberdeen shooter: Trans. Denver school shooter: Trans. Iowa school shooter: Trans/genderfluid. AMC stabber: Trans. Are you starting to see a pattern here? IT'S AN EPIDEMIC.' Westman is the tragic end result of an ideology that shuns reality and insists on validating fantasy—to the detriment of women, children, and the collective sanity of our nation at large. The carnage at Annunciation Catholic and the other sites of trans violence may be the most devastating consequence of trans ideology, but the innocents who were shot or killed in those instances are far from its only victims. At schools across America, particularly in blue states led by Democrat governors, biological reality continues to be shoved aside in favor of genderbending woke madness—and children continue to suffer. Back in February, Trump, flanked by dozens of cheering female athletes of all ages, signed an executive order on Keeping Men Out Of Women's Sports which banned biological males from competing in women's sports at all levels of competition. 'With this executive order the war on women's sports is over,' President Trump declared. 'From now on women's sports will only be for women.' In another executive order on Defending Women From Gender Ideology Extremism And Restoring Biological Truth To The Federal Government, the President declared 'It is the policy of the United States to recognize two sexes, male and female. These sexes are not changeable and are grounded in fundamental and incontrovertible reality. Under my direction, the Executive Branch will enforce all sex protective laws to promote this reality.' But some school districts, particularly in blue states, continue to deliberately defy the law and put the legal rights, safety and privacy of students at risk. At James B. Conant High School in Hoffman Estates, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago, a male player was selected for the women's volleyball team. According to Reduxx, an online news source dedicated to women's rights and child safeguarding, 'The boy, who stands 6’4, was chosen for the team despite never having played volleyball before.' " (At Schools Across America, The Trans Agenda Marches On by Sara Dogan). Christianity. Look at the Christian destruction of science and see the promotion of a supernaturalist worldview in place of empirical investigations. See commitments to faith darken laboratories, classrooms and research stations. See lectures advocating theology promoted in courses ostensibly devoted to science. See individuals rejecting the belief in a divine being proclaimed to be nonphysical, nonperceivable, nonlocatable, all powerful and contradictory, condemned as arrogant, bigoted and dismissive. See the proclamation that existence is not necessary but the product of God's handiwork. See the proclamation that the world of science, natural causality and natural laws must be rejected in favor of the Christian Bible. See students taught that the universe is a product of God's arbitrary will, that "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth," and thousands of years ago, God created man: "The Fall 2025 semester has commenced at universities throughout the US Many new and returning students will pursue a course of study in various STEM related fields. I teach chemistry to two separate STEM (Science, Engineering, Technology, and Math) cohorts. One is made up of students preparing for careers in medicine, forensics, marine biology, and graduate research. The second and much larger cohort is enrolled in our university’s school of nursing. But teaching chemistry is only half of what I do. Since I teach at a Christian university, I am afforded the unique privilege of integrating a Christian worldview into my lectures and laboratory classes. We’ve been sold a bill of goods. Scientists have told us that theology and science don’t belong together, and that only science has the authority to make truth claims about reality. This is not science; it is scientism, a worldview based on the arrogance of philosophical materialism. Both sides of the faith-science argument should be presented to students. They should be allowed to consider that they might not be the result of some blind, unguided process that began millions of years ago in a warm little pond—the socalled primordial soup. In my classroom, they will hear me say that God created man in his own image so that we can share in his own thoughts and see the world as his precise handiwork. I want my students to consider that the first verse recorded in the Bible—'In the beginning, God created the heaven and the earth'—is a truth claim, and a valid starting point for the study of science, as it was for some of the greatest scientists the world has ever known." (A Case For Integrating A Christian Worldview In The Science Classroom by Gregory Rummo). Science Today. Surveying the shameful past of the West, Edward Gibbon championed the age in which he lived, the Age of Enlightenment, as he condemned "the rubbish of the Dark Ages." In his world famous History Of The Decline And Fall Of The Roman Empire, Gibbon describes Classical civilization's decline and fall into the savage jungles of religion: the Christian religion, the Germanic religions, and the religions of caesarism, statism and socialism. Less then three centuries after Gibbon wrote his postmortem on Rome, the decline and fall of civilization has returned. The players have changed but the play has remained the same. The twenty first century has seen the suicide of the West with the rifles of Marxism and Christianity.

THE DEVIL'S ARMY

Nightmare. Bad dream. A succession of images, scenes, emotions and sensations occurring during sleep, causing fear and anxiety. Nightmares which come true establish hell on earth, spread despair among people, and eliminate all expectations of relief. In the twentieth century, a nightmare came true which drowned the world in rivers of blood. It had been present for thousands of years but achieved actuality in the West after the clocks in 1899 struck midnight. It is the nightmare which proclaims that individuals possess no meaning or existence, that they have no right to live or work for their own sake, and their life and work belong to a mystical, supernatural, nonphysical entity called Society. It is the nightmare which proclaims that this god called Society has the right to dispose of individuals in accordance with its own needs and interests, and the right to sacrifice, enslave and kill people to advance its own good. It is a nightmare called socialism, and to read its pronouncements down through the centuries is to look inside a dark world of virulent mental disease. This disease had been in circulation for thousands of years before political revolutions in the twentieth century established it for the first time as official government policy, and inaugurated an age of state violence and mass murder the likes of which had never been seen before on earth. Socialism. In the fifth book of the New Testament appears the first page of the history of this disease, thousands of years before treatises and manifestos promoting socialism were composed by Karl Marx and his movement. Listen to the world's first socialists reject freedom and exalt community, commonality and public possession of goods in the name of God: "They held to the teaching of the apostles and to the fellowship, the breaking of bread and the prayers. They were all filled with fear, for many miracles and signs occurred through the apostles. And all who believed formed a community and had everything in common. They sold their possessions and goods and gave to everyone as much as they needed. Day after day they stayed in the temple united, broke bread in their homes and ate together in joy and simplicity of heart. They praised God and were loved by the people. And every day the Lord brought into their fellowship all those who were to be saved." (Acts, 2:42-47). Socialism. On page two of the history of socialism appear the words of its modern day prophet. Listen to Karl Marx proclaim that capitalism is a regime of oppression and exploitation of the true working class, the class of mindless, unskilled, proletarian animal laborers whose muscles create all wealth. Since muscles and not minds create all wealth, the proletariat is robbed of its rightful profits by the bourgeois class of mind workers. Capital, mind workers and private property are symbols of oppression and exploitation of the proletariat and must be abolished. Capital steals from labor and must be confiscated. The notions of freedom, individuality, autonomy and independence are bourgeois constructs. Individual freedom is slavery, while slavery to the collective is true freedom. A progressive society has abolished all forms of individual freedom; it has abolished free selling, free buying, free trade, free markets, free production and free enterprise; and is a collectivist, egalitarian swampland ruled by proletarian jackboots: "The theory of communists may be summed up in the single sentence: Abolition of private property. Does wage labor create any property for the laborer? Not a bit. It creates capital, that is, that kind of property which exploits wage labor, and which cannot increase except upon condition of begetting a new supply of wage labor for fresh exploitation. Property, in its present form, is based on the antagonism of capital and wage labor. In bourgeois society capital is independent and has individuality, while the living person is dependent and has no individuality. The abolition of this state of things is called by the bourgeois, abolition of individuality and freedom! And rightly so. The abolition of bourgeois individuality, bourgeois independence, and bourgeois freedom is undoubtedly aimed at. By freedom is meant, under the present bourgeois conditions of production, free trade, free selling and buying. But if selling and buying disappear, free selling and buying disappear also. This talk about free selling and buying, and all the other 'brave words' of our bourgeois about freedom in general, have a meaning, if any, only in contrast with restricted selling and buying, with the fettered traders of the Middle Ages, but have no meaning when opposed to the communist abolition of buying and selling, of the bourgeois conditions of production, and of the bourgeois itself. You are horrified at our intending to do away with private property. But in your existing society, private property is already done away with for nine tenths of the population; its existence for the few is solely due to its nonexistence in the hands of those nine tenths. You reproach us, therefore, with intending to do away with a form of property, the necessary condition for whose existence is the nonexistence of any property for the immense majority of society. In one word, you reproach us with intending to do away with your property. Precisely so; that is just what we intend." (Communist Manifesto by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels). Socialism. On page three of the history of socialism appears the nightmare actuality of the system, which has engulfed the twenty first century and brought down the final chapter of civilization. Look at the world of socialism and see freedom crushed beneath the iron heel of totalitarianism, dictatorship and the brutality of the collective. See famine, mass murder and genocide perpetrated in the name of the people. See a planetary grave containing 100 million victims dug by socialist ideologues from Vladimir Lenin to Joseph Stalin to Mao Zedong to Fidel Castro to Pol Pot to Kim Jong Il to Kim Jong Un to Daniel Ortega to Hugo Chavez to Nicolas Maduro. See the Russian Revolution and Russian gulags enslave and kill tens of millions of people. See the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics make history by being the first state to outlaw all forms of freedom. See Soviet terror and planned famine perpetrate class genocide in Ukraine. See Soviet dekulakization perpetrate class genocide across the Russian countryside. See Mao's Great Leap Forward claim the lives of tens of millions of people. See Pol Pot's Cambodia transformed into a national killing field and mass grave claiming one quarter of the population. See Kim Jong Il's and Kim Jong Un's North Korea starve 3.5 million people. See Fidel Castro's Cuba confiscate farms, businesses, possessions and people, and send millions of refugees running for their lives. See Hugo Chavez's and Nicolas Maduro's Venezuala reduce the nation to a savage plain of repression, destitution and bankruptcy. See the robbing of Peter to support Paul and the collectivization of every aspect of society. See the violation of the right to property, the sanctity, safety and liberty of the individual, and the right to keep and dispose of the fruits of one's mind as one sees fit, perpetrated by a government of gangsters without equal in history: "Whereas socialist ideology necessitates a concentration of power that has, time and time again, collapsed into communist regimes, totalitarian rule, and brutal dictatorships; Whereas socialism has repeatedly led to famine and mass murders, and the killing of over 100,000,000 people worldwide; Whereas many of the greatest crimes in history were committed by socialist ideologues, including Vladimir Lenin, Joseph Stalin, Mao Zedong, Fidel Castro, Pol Pot, Kim Jong Il, Kim Jong Un, Daniel Ortega, Hugo Chavez, and Nicolas Maduro; Whereas tens of millions died in the Bolshevik Revolution, at least 10,000,000 people were sent to the gulags in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and millions more starved in the Terror Famine (Holodomor) in Ukraine; Whereas between 15,000,000 and 55,000,000 people starved to death in the wake of famine and devastation caused by the Great Leap Forward in China; Whereas the socialist experiment in Cambodia led to the killing fields in which over a million people were gruesomely murdered; Whereas up to 3,500,000 people have starved in North Korea, dividing a land of freedom from a land of destitution; Whereas the Castro regime in Cuba expropriated the land of Cuban farmers and the businesses of Cuban entrepreneurs, stealing their possessions and their livelihoods, and exiling millions with nothing but the clothes on their backs; Whereas the implementation of socialism in Venezuela has turned a once prosperous country into a failed State with the highest rate of inflation in the world; Whereas President Thomas Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, wrote, 'To take from one, because it is thought that his own industry and that of his fathers has acquired too much, in order to spare to others, who, or whose fathers have not exercised equal industry and skill, is to violate arbitrarily the first principle of association, the guarantee to every one of a free exercise of his industry, and the fruits acquired by it'; Whereas President James Madison, the ‘Father of the Constitution, wrote that it 'is not a just government, nor is property secure under it, where the property which a man has in his personal safety and personal liberty, is violated by arbitrary seizures of one class of citizens for the service of the rest'; and Whereas the United States was founded on the belief in the sanctity of the individual, to which the collectivist system of socialism in all of its forms is fundamentally and necessarily opposed: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress denounces socialism in all its forms, and opposes the implementation of socialist policies in the United States." (Denouncing The Horrors Of Socialism, United States Senate, 119th Congress, First Session, September 4, 2025). Socialism. Marching under flags spanning the colors of the spectrum, marching under black flags, brown flags, red flags and green flags, the armies of socialism promote slavery and killing as they have never been promoted before. Christian socialism.

Proletarian socialism, Aryan socialism, black socialism, indigenous socialism, national socialism, ethnic socialism, feminist socialism and democratic socialism. The names have changed but not the carnage or the costs for human freedom.

EUROPE'S DIGITAL TOTALITARIAN ACT

It is the womb of Western civilization. After its first Christian dominated Dark Ages, it saw the light of reason and gave the world humanism, the arts and sciences, and the principles of freedom in modern times. A post Classical civilization on the same continent as the Apollonian world of the Greeks and Romans, it gave the world the Age of Discovery, the Age of Enlightenment, the British Glorious Revolution, the French Revolution and the Industrial Revolution. Bounded by Arctic Ocean, the Atlantic Ocean, the Mediterranean Sea and Asia, and containing ten percent of the world's population, this is the continent of Europe and in the twenty first century, it has rejected its legacies of science and freedom and turned back the clock to the Dark Ages. The new Dark Ages engulfing Europe, fueled by popular demand, is not ruled by the Catholic Church but by its heir and successor, setting a new god called Society upon the throne of power in place of the Christian God in Heaven. In the twenty first century, Europe through its European Union has embraced the modern day religion of Marxism and become a totalitarian regime seeking to stamp out free speech. Its new twenty first century god is a mutated neoMarxist monster called Gender, Race and Class Politics, and this nightmare creature has enforced the principles of the party line and political correctness which run counter to everything Europe has traditionally stood for. The Europe of today and the Europe of yesteryear present a study in contrasts which has disgraced the continent and pointed to the suicide of the West. Europe of Yesteryear. Look at the Europe of yesteryear and see the protection of freedom of conscience and belief: "Give me the liberty to know, to utter, and to argue freely according to conscience, above all liberties." (Areopagitica by John Milton). See the protection of freedom of thought and the tolerance of opposing opinions: "Everyone is by absolute natural right the master of his own thoughts, and thus utter failure will attend any attempt in a commonwealth to force men to speak only as prescribed by the sovereign despite their different and opposing opinions." (Treatise on Theology and Politics by Baruch Spinoza). See the protection of freedom of writing, printing and information, and the free organization of the state: "No evidence should be needed that a certain freedom of writing and printing is one of the strongest bulwarks of a free organization of the state, as, without it, the estates would not have sufficient information for the drafting of good laws, and those dispensing justice would not be monitored, nor would the subjects know the requirements of the law, the limits of the rights of government, and their responsibilities. Education and ethical conduct would be crushed; coarseness in thought, speech, and manners would prevail, and dimness would darken the entire sky of our freedom in a few years." (Anders Chydenius, quoted in Self Censorship Has Always Encouraged State Censorship by Jukka Luoma). See the protection of the freedom to speak, write and print without permission from the government: "The free communication of ideas and opinions is one of the most precious of the rights of man. Every citizen may, accordingly, speak, write, and print with freedom, but shall be responsible for such abuses of this freedom as shall be defined by law." (French Declaration of the Rights of Man and of the Citizen, Article 11). See the protection of freedom of thought, communication, reason and argumentaion: "When men can freely communicate their thoughts and their sufferings, real or imaginary, their passions spend themselves in air, like gunpowder scattered upon the surface. But pent up by terrors, they work unseen, burst forth in a moment, and destroy everything in their course. Let reason be opposed to reason, and argument to argument." (Thomas Erskine). See the protection of the free marketplace of ideas and opinions: "If any opinion is compelled to silence, that opinion may, for aught we can certainly know, be true. To deny this is to assume our own infallibility. Though the silenced opinion be an error, it may, and very commonly does, contain a portion of truth; and since the general or prevailing opinion on any subject is rarely or never the whole truth, it is only by the collision of adverse opinions that the remainder of the truth has any chance of being supplied. Even if the received opinion be not only true, but the whole truth; unless it is suffered to be, and actually is, vigorously and earnestly contested, it will, by most of those who receive it, be held in the manner of a prejudice, with little comprehension or feeling of its rational grounds." (On Liberty by John Stuart Mill). See the protection against the state suppression of opinions: "The peculiar evil of silencing the expression of an opinion is that it is robbing the human race. posterity as well as the existing generation, those who dissent from the opinion, still more than those who hold it. If the opinion is right, they are deprived of the opportunity of exchanging error for truth; if wrong, they lose, what is almost as great a benefit, the clearer perception and livelier impression of truth produced by its collision with error." (On Liberty by John Stuart Mill). Europe Today. Passed by the European Parliament and the Council of the European Union on October 19, 2022, the Digital Services Act is the voice of the new Europe in its final stage of totalitarian free fall. Look at the law and see the repeal of Europe as a free society and its descent into a Marxist echo chamber. See Marxist censors at the EU and member state levels prohibit as harmful antiMarxist political speech. See them prohibit criticisms of open borders and unvetted Muslim immigration. See them prohibit criticisms of radical environmentalism and its global doomsday clock. See them prohibit speech by conservatives and libertarians. See them seek to stamp out free speech throughout the world and establish a global Marxist censorship regime. See them prohibit people from posting statements such as "we need to take back our country from illegal aliens and Muslim migrants bent on destroying free institutions." See them prohibit as hate speech antiMarxist opinions, humor, parody and satire. See them replace the free exchange of ideas with a regime of Marxist content moderation. See them prohibit as representations of discriminatory ideologies antiMarxist videos, images and texts. See them establish a censorship regime which casts constitutional rights and liberal democracy to the winds. See them empower bureaucrats to prohibit antiMarxist points of view and the fundamental freedoms which for centuries had made Europe the envy of the world and a beacon of light for the oppressed: "On paper, the DSA is bad. In practice, it is even worse. Documents produced to the Committee under subpoena show that European censors at the Commission and member state levels target core political speech that is neither harmful nor illegal, attempting to stifle debate on topics such as immigration and the environment. The censorship is largely one sided, almost uniformly targeting political conservatives. Worse, European regulators expect platforms to deliver on DSA censorship demands by changing their global content moderation policies, meaning that European censorship may affect what Americans can say and see online. On May 7, 2025, the Commission, the enforcer of the DSA, hosted the DSA MultiStakeholder Workshop. Unlike several contemporaneous workshops about the Digital Markets Act (DMA), the EU’s competition legislation, the Commission refused to let the public watch the DSA workshop and specifically told platforms not to share information about it. Documents obtained by the Committee under subpoena reveal what Commission officials told platforms privately and offer critical insights into the DSA censorship process. Exercises from the Commission’s May 2025 workshop show the true definitions of key terms in the DSA and Commission regulators’ censorship expectations of social media platforms. For example, the Commission’s workshop labeled a hypothetical social media post stating 'we need to take back our country'—a common, anodyne political statement—as 'illegal hate speech' that platforms are required to censor under the DSA. The documents also reveal that humor and satire are top censorship targets under the DSA. For example, the Commission’s workshop asked platforms how they could use 'content moderation processes' to 'address memes that may be used to spread hate speech or discriminatory ideologies.' Content targeted by the EU—core political speech, humor, parody, and satire—is protected under any reasonable free speech legal regime, including the First Amendment to the US Constitution. Yet in Europe, and potentially around the world, social media platforms must censor political opinions, humor, and satire that runs afoul of the EU's censorship regime. The new European censorship regime, as embodied in the DSA, departs from centuries old principles of free speech that serve as the foundation of modern day liberal democracies. The Committee on the Judiciary is charged by the House of Representatives with upholding the fundamental freedoms of the American people. Overzealous European bureaucrats, empowered by the DSA to impose global censorship standards, pose a serious risk to the freedom of speech in the United States. This interim report documents how the new European censorship regime targets particular points of view and infringes on Americans' constitutional rights. The Committee will continue its oversight to inform legislative reforms that will uphold the Constitution and protect Americans' freedom of expression." (The Foreign Censorship Threat: How The European Union's Digital Services Act Compels Global Censorship And Infringes On American Free Speech, Committee on the Judiciary, United States House of Representatives, July 25, 2025). Europe Today. The late twentieth century were world historical years for Europe. They brought the Revolutions of 1989, the fall of the Berlin Wall and the dissolution of the Soviet Union. But all the while, Marxism was advancing apace across the continent, fueled by popular demand. Censoring as misinformation, disinformation, deceptive content and forms of hate and violence speech critical of the prevailing Marxist orthodoxies, a neoSoviet empire of thought control was developing. Its greatest monument is the Digital Services Act.

AN AMERICAN IN PARIS

Dirt is defined as unclean matter. There are four main kinds of dirt: debris, dust, grime and filth. The first kind is scattered pieces of waste; the second is a powder of organic or mineral matter; the third is soot or carbon particles; and the third is foul matter or the remains of undigested food. In 2011, the British health research charity Welcome Trust sponsored an exhibition on dirt. It featured the famous dirt heaps at Euston and King's Cross in London in the nineteenth century, and the world's largest dirt pit, the Fresh Kills landfill in Staten Island, New York City. In the twenty first century, in a land five thousand kilometers away from Europe, a stream of moral dirt has commenced a journey to the continent, an army of unclean souls the likes has never been seen before on earth. In the twenty first century, in the United States of America, an exodus of Marxists of all stripes and varieties is seeking to escape from the campaign launched by Donald Trump to excise the virulent extragrowths of Marxism from society, and reestablish some measure of sanity to the nation, and in desperation, this exodus has knocked on Europe's door for refuge. In the twenty first century, leading voices of the number one gutter religion of our time, collecting human debris, dust, grime and filth from the sewers of resentment and forging it into a mass movement and revolution, have landed on Europe's shores, begging to set up shop and spread their insanity without the official resistance they encountered in America. In the twenty first century, representatives of the Marxist universe in America have launched a mass migration to Europe with the aim of continuing their proselytizing and subversion unencumbered by the backlash led by Trump. They have arrived in all the colors of the Marxist rainbow wearing the triple gorgon heads of the Marxist gender, race and class monster, and seek to join their comrades in Europe. Look at them and see an American cross section of the final stop of Western civilization, a stop marked suicide, now pulling into Europe after government rejection in their native land. American Migrants. Look at the American migrants in Europe and see them proclaim that human gender has no relation to the genetic reality discovered by science, and can be changed by human will. Males who claim they are females are real females, and females who claim they are males are real males. Transgender females are as real as biological females, and transgender males are as real as biological males. Psychotic transpeople who claim they are members of the opposite sex should be granted full legal recognition for the sex they claim to be, and should be entitled to enter the spaces, use the facilities and play on the sports teams reserved for that sex. Donald Trump's America is not safe for transpeople and they must leave the nation. Defending reason, sanity, science and common sense, Donald Trump's America is not a nation tolerant of transpeople and is a living hell for them. Defending reason, sanity, science and common sense, Donald Trump's America is run by a bigoted dictatorship refusing to grant transpeople their legal rights. Defending reason, science, sanity and common sense, Donald Trump's America is hate filled and transphobic. Signing an executive order defining male and female by the immutable facts of reality, by genetic markers rather than human self declarations, signing an executive order prohibiting males from participating in sports events for females, and promising to prohibit male athletes from competing in women's events in the 2028 Olympic Games in Los Angeles, Donald Trump is an authoritarian. Prohibiting surgical mutilations and puberty blockers for children who claim they are members of the opposite sex, Donald Trump's America is a tyranny: "There is a small but growing number of US citizens attempting to claim asylum in Europe, on the grounds that they are transgender. One such individual is Veronica Clifford Carlos, a 28 year old artist from San Francisco, who left the U.S. in June this year, hoping to be granted refugee status in the Netherlands. Clifford-Carlos claimed that the US is no longer safe for trans people, and that 'I have people screaming 'faggot' at me in the street. I have people threatening my life, threatening to assault me, threatening to follow me home and kill my family.' Shockingly, for a country that normally appears to accept anyone from anywhere, no questions asked, the Netherlands rejected Clifford-Carlos's application. In August, the American launched a lawsuit against the rejection—the first of its kind. Clifford-Carlos is not, however, alone in fleeing the supposed dystopian hellscape of Trump's America. The advocacy group backing the lawsuit, LGBT Asylum Support, says it's currently working with 20 other transgender Americans to make asylum claims. Official data from the Netherlands show that a total of 29 Americans applied for asylum there in the first half of this year, though the reason for each case is not recorded. It is exceedingly rare for US citizens to be granted asylum in European countries. Usually, this only happens incidentally, when an American dependent of someone with another citizenship—such as a parent—is given refugee status. For the Dutch government—or any European government—to accept an asylum application from America would imply criticism of the US government. This is something that any European government would, understandably, be reluctant to do. More importantly, there is virtually no rational reason for the Netherlands or anywhere else to accept these American 'refugees.' The belief that the US is some kind of bigoted dictatorship is completely delusional. The 'transphobic' regime these people claim to live under is simply the upholding of basic common sense. Since taking office in January, Donald Trump has introduced various pieces of legislation that reaffirm biological reality. As one of his first acts, Trump signed an executive order forbidding males from participating in sporting events for women and girls, as well as vowing to keep male athletes out of women's events at the 2028 Olympic Games in Los Angeles. He also issued an order stating that, for purposes of federal law and administrative policy, male and female are defined by biological sex rather than self declared gender identity—an approach supported by most Americans. Various bills have been introduced on state levels attempting to ban gender transition surgeries and cross sex hormones for minors, including a successful statute in Tennessee. This hardly sounds like authoritarian overreach. Rather, the Trump administration is simply clearing out the malign influence of transgender ideology from government agencies and state funded institutions—something that should have been done a long time ago. Americans mostly do not think that children should be allowed to be surgically mutilated or given experimental drugs to stop puberty, simply because they feel like the opposite sex. Restricting this horrific practice is not tyranny, but basic safeguarding." (The Weird Rise of American 'Refugees' by Lauren Smith). American Migrants. Look at the American migrants in Europe and see them proclaim that a progressive society rejects natural, individual justice in favor of mystical, tribal, social justice, and is thus opposed to Donald Trump's America. It promotes the dismantling of scientific and technological civilization in the name of curbing greenhouse gas emissions, and is thus opposed to Donald Trump's America. It calls global warming hysteria legitimate climate science, and is thus opposed to Donald Trump's America. It calls the reduction of humans to apes and the rejection of human essentialism legitimate anthropology, and is thus opposed to Donald Trump's America. It condemns nonpartisan inquiry as fascist antiscience, and is thus opposed to Donald Trump's America. It condemns science not subservient to Marxist gender, race and class politics as national socialist antiscience, and is thus opposed to Donald Trump's America. It rejects the Enlightenment principles of empiricism, objectivity and universal truth, and promotes apriori gender, race and class based truths under the banners of a Safe Place for Science, and is thus opposed to Donald Trump's America: "A troupe of climate scientists, social justice theorists, and biological anthropologists has arrived in France, denouncing the US president with the breathless intensity of failed actors who found tenure instead of a stage. Anticipating federal funding cuts against the backdrop of DOGE [Department of Government Efficiency], some academics have started looking for new environments more conducive to funding their research. For some, the temptation to present this as a political choice —with themselves in the role of exiles—has been very strong. Melodrama rules the day, as could be seen when the first group of 'refugees' rolled up in France. Aix-Marseille University saw its president, Eric Berton, liken the situation to that of European academics who fled nazi persecution before and during World War II: 'What is at play here today is not unrelated to another dark period of our history.' Most of the eight US researchers in his audience seemed to confirm this analysis, while speaking, on condition of anonymity, to European Union mouthpiece Politico. Few if any of these have signed contracts with French universities, some of whose existing staff fear preferential treatment for the new arrivals. Berton, like failed former French President Francois Holland, wants the creation of an official 'scientific refugee' status for Trump's scientific refuseniks. AMU [Aix-Marseille University] claims that, to date, almost 300 researchers from prestigious US universities have applied to join its Safe Place for Science program." (Les Miserables: American Academics Seek Asylum (And Attention) In France, TEC News, July 1, 2025). American Migrants. Nathaniel Bentley was an English shop owner in the eighteenth century notorious for his filthy appearance. He came from an upper class family, attended university, spoke multiple languages, dressed impeccably, attended the coronation of Louis XVI in France in 1775, and was given the nickname: the Beau of Leadenhall Street. But when he turned 38, Nathaniel Bentley changed his life. He stopped washing himself and became the embodiment of squalor. By the time he moved out of his shop in 1804 and the contents were sold, which included mummified rats, he had acquired another nickname: Dirty Dick. Marching under the Marxist banners of mysticism, tribalism, transgenderism and radical environmentalism, and condemning reason, science, sanity and common sense as fascist, racist, patriarchal, and instruments of capitalist oppression and exploitation, Marxists in America have fled from Donald Trump's antiMarxist counterattack. They have fled to Europe to add dirt to its waters.

THE GATHERING STORM

It comes from the Proto Germanic word sturmaz, meaning noise and tumult. It became the word storm in the English language. With their tornadoes, hail, thunder, lightning, strong winds and strong rains, storms wreak devastation wherever they surge, harming life and property through massive flooding, road blockage and violence from the air. In the twentieth century, a storm gathered and engulfed the world in chaos and conflagration. Its tornadoes, hail, thunder, lightning, winds and rains came from two mass movements which together have dug the grave of Western civilization. These movements have a common source, and from this source they have fashioned jackboots of fear and control which have spread out and terrorized nations and continents. The common source is Marxism, the religion of class tribalism, and the two movements it spawned are Soviet communism and German national socialism. The first movement replicated the original Marxism and established a Communist Bloc slave empire, headquarted in Moscow and Beijung, marching under the banners of the international proletariat. The second movement retained the Marxist method of looking at man through the lens of tribes but changed the tribe from class to race, and established a Third Reich slave empire reaching across Europe, and marching under the banners of the Aryan master race. Soviet communism and Hitler's fascism, class Marxism and race Marxism, would leave their claw prints across the world, and poison the masses and cultural and political establishments in nation after nation. Look at the storm surge brought by these movements in the 1930s and see the onset of world war. Storm Surge. Look at Hitler's fascist aggression and see the dominoes of nations fall. 1938: the Anschluss with Austria and the annexation of Sudetenland in Czechoslovakia. 1939: the invasion of Czechoslovakia and the establishment of the German protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia on Czech territory. The invasion of Poland. 1940: the invasion of Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg, France, Denmark, Norway and Romania. 1941: the invasion of Yugoslavia and Greece. Look at a rising fascist movement in America and see it enact the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act in 1930. The purpose of the act was to raise tariffs on imported goods and protect American industries from foreign competition during the Great Depression. Listen to the act and hear the fascist goosesteps drill out the dogmas of social responsibility and state protection of labor and capital: "An Act To provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, to protect American labor, and for other purposes." Look at the America First Committee, founded in 1940 to oppose American military intervention in Europe to stop Hitler. Proclaiming to champion American freedom and national independence in place of social responsibility, the committee refused to condemn the Hitlerian advance to make Britain, America, Europe and the free world fall like dominoes. Look at the America First Committee and see the proclamations of a fascist front. See the opposition to American intervention on the grounds of race hatred and antisemitism. See the advocacy of American intervention for the sole purpose of protecting the Aryan race and defeating "Jewish interests": "The America First Committee, or AFC, sought to keep the United States out of World War II, on the basis that the fight against fascism was not America's fight. Some supported this position for motives of isolationism, others as pacifists or conscientious objectors, but a great many–like Lindbergh himself– also believed that what they called Jewish interests were trying to manipulate America into joining the war against its national interests. Implying, again as did the nazis, that only Jewish people criticize nazis and that Jewish interests were not only distinct from, but opposed to, America's national interest. The obvious implication being that Jewish-Americans are not really Americans at all. Lindbergh repeatedly said in his America First speeches that America should only join a European war if it was to protect what he called 'the white races' from foreign invasion by 'some Asiatic intruder.' That was reason to go to war in Europe, but fighting fascism for Lindbergh was not. As long as white people were in charge, he said, in so many words, it didn't matter if they were German fascists or British democrats. The AFC was denounced by many at the time as a force for appeasement; Lindbergh a Vichy figure–an American collaborator." (America First And American Fascism by Sarah Churchwell). Gathering Storm. In the twenty first century, the legions of fascism are on the march again, achieving influence at the highest levels of American government, imposing massive import tariffs and seeking to prevent the former arsenal of the free world from assisting Ukraine to defeat the aggressive advance of a new fascist Russia. Donald Trump has launched a campaign to roll back as far as possible communism in America. He has sought to roll back as far as possible the one hundred and twenty five year old American welfare regulatory state. He has sought to roll back as far as possible the excrescences of communism appearing in the form of a rampaging, triple gorgon, gender, race and class monster. He has effected the largest reduction in taxes in the nation's history. He has effected the largest reduction in welfare benefits in the nation's history. Building on his first term achievement of abolishing penalties for not obtaining health insurance, established by Barack Obama under the Affordable Care Act, he has abolished the federal command to buy electric cars, a command given in the form of tax credits, established by Joe Biden under the Inflation Reduction Act, and has established himself as the mandate liberation president, advancing the cause of human liberty. He has ended welfare benefits for illegal immigrants. He has apprehended, deported and prevented the entrance of more illegal immigrants than any other president, and reduced the appearance of illegal immigants at the border to zero, an achievement unmatched by any other president. He has established a policy of business deregulation which has save American consumers trillions of dollars. He has challenged the transgenderist rejection of the genetic basis of sex determination by defining male and female in real, biological terms. He has prohibited men claiming they are women from playing on women's sports teams. He has outlawed the chemical and surgical mutilation of children who claim they are members of the opposite sex. He has ending federal funding for foreign aid programs on the grounds that America is not a sacrificial lamb for the poor of the world. He has ended federal funding for the Marxist transmitting towers at National Public Radio and the Public Broadcasting System. He has outlawed federal programs which violate the Constitution and discriminate on the basis of race and gender in the name of diversity, equity and inclusion. He has outlawed political indoctrination in public schools and the transformation of school children into Manchurian candidates for Marxism, waiting to spring into action: "Congress passed the One Big Beautiful Bill, thereby delivering the largest tax cut in American history, increasing Americans' take home pay by as much as $13,300, and terminating benefits for at least 1.4 million illegal immigrants who were gaming the system. Congress passed President Trump's historic rescissions package, which will save taxpayers $9 billion in wasteful, politically motivated funding for leftwing foreign aid scams and biased NPR and PBS. US Customs and Border Patrol encountered just 6,070 illegal immigrants at the southern border in June—setting a new record low (15% lower than the previous record set in March). Additionally, zero illegal immigrants were released into the US on parole in June, compared to 27,766 a year prior. The administration has ramped up deportations, breaking a record for the number of deportation flights in a month in June. Additionally, over 600 known and suspected terrorists have been removed from the United States. President Trump's deregulatory efforts have already saved Americans over $180 billion, or $2,100 per family of four, with the rollback of automobile related rules alone expected to save consumers more than $1.1 trillion. President Trump has signed over 170 executive orders, delivering on key campaign promises such as closing the border, protecting children from chemical and surgical mutilation, removing men from women's sports, unleashing American energy, ending federal censorship, ending the radical indoctrination in K-12 schooling, and ending radical and wasteful government DEI programs and preferencing." (President Trump Marks Six Months In Office With Historic Successes, White House, July 25, 2025). Donald Trump's unprecedented national freedom agenda, his program to make America great again by making government at all levels legal and constitutional again, has been impaired by two fascist policies threatening to bring back the 1930s. The first is the imposition of import tariffs and the second is the appeasement of Vladimir Putin. Look at Trump's new tariff regime and see fascist policies at work. See government protection of domestic manufacturing and domestic jobs. See government coercion of American consumers to buy American made goods. See the protection of labor and capital, and the elimination of consumer freedom of choice and the right make purchase decisions in accordance with self interest, promoted in the name of national justice, the national interest and statism: "Since returning to office in January, US President Donald Trump has introduced a sweeping global program of tariffs, and threatened many more. Trump argues that the tariffs boost American manufacturing and protect jobs. Trump says tariffs will encourage US consumers to buy more American made goods, increase the amount of tax raised and boost investment. He wants to reduce the gap between the value of goods the US buys from other countries and those it sells to them--known as the trade deficit. He argues that America has been taken advantage of by 'cheaters,' and 'pillaged' by foreigners." (What Tariffs Has Trump Announced And Why? by Jennifer Clarke). Look at Vladimir Putin's war against Ukraine and see fascist rhetoric at work and see dominoes fall one by one in a free and democratic nation. 2014: the Russian invasion of Crimea. 2014: the Russian invasion of Donbas. 2022: the Russian invasion of Ukraine. The total number of military and civilian deaths in the Russian campaign against Ukraine since 2014: 1.5 million. See Putin justify his campaign of deUkrainization and the destruction of freedom in the nation in the name of ethnic politics, racial politics and the myth of one people: "The Russian leader has long questioned Ukraine's right to exist, claiming that 'modern Ukraine was entirely created by Russia' after the communist revolution in 1917. In a long winded 2021 essay he even suggested 'Russians and Ukrainians were one people' dating back to the late ninth century. Last year he told US TV talk show host Tucker Carlson that Ukraine was an 'artificial state.' Those comments have led many to believe that the goal of the invasion was in effect to erase the state of Ukraine. Russia's state run Ria news agency explained that 'denazification is inevitably also deUkrainization'--seemingly tying the idea of erasing Ukraine to the stated goal of the invasion." (Why Did Putin's Russia Invade Ukraine? by Paul Kirby). Now see Donald Trump's policy of appeasement of Putin. See Trump issue ultimatums, warnings, threats and deadlines to Putin without meaning or substance of any kind. See Trump allow Putin to reject all proposal for concessions, ceasefires and peace treaties, and allow Putin to continue his war of annihilation of Ukraine: "Last month US President Donald Trump invited Putin to Alaska for a summit meeting. Back home proKremlin commentators hailed the event as evidence that Western efforts to isolate Russia over the war in Ukraine had failed. To convince the Kremlin to end the fighting Trump has previously set ultimatums and deadlines; he's threatened further sanctions if Russia won't make peace. But Trump hasn't followed through on his threats--and that's another reason for Russia's confidence. Putin publicly praises Trump's peace efforts. And yet he has rejected Trump's ceasefire proposals and shown no desire to make concessions over the war in Ukraine." (What's Behind Putin's Uncompromising Stance On Ukraine? by Steve Rosenberg). Gathering Storm. The storms clouds of the 1930s are gathering across the West. The imposition of tariffs in the name of economic populism and national rebirth, and a green light given to Vladimir Putin to establish peace in Ukraine on his terms, and establish the peace of capitulation, are familiar to students of history. They see a nightmare looming over the horizon and are powerless to stop it.

BATTLEGROUND FRANCE

From July 1940 to September 1944, it had a new name. It was called Vichy France and was ruled by Marshal Philippe Petain from its capital Vichy in the central part of the nation. A puppet state of the Third Reich, it swept away the republican slogan Liberty, Equality and Fraternity with a new fascist slogan, Work, Family and Fatherland, and sought to crush constitutional rights beneath the jackboot of a National Revolution. After the Allied liberation of Paris, the treasonous regime protected by domestic militias and the German Gestapo collapsed, and its leaders were imprisoned for life or executed. Vichy France was a battleground between fascism and communism, movements united by a vision of France devoid of human freedom and the institutions of the Enlightenment: "Although De Gaulle [Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Free French Forces] was seriously distrustful of French communists and saw them as a threat to his vision for France, he was uncharacteristically diplomatic in his dealings with them. It is widely agreed that once they joined the Resistance in earnest, they proved to be some of the most formidable foes to fascism and the Third Reich." (Communists In The French Resistance, Library of Congress). In the twenty first century, the ghosts of the Vichy past have returned to haunt France, and the nation has again has been reduced to a battleground between communism and fascism. The names and faces have changed but the battle is the same, fought between those who demand human sacrifice in the name of a class and those who demand human sacrifice in the name of a race, and as in yesteryear, the battle involves the overwhelming majority of the French people, for the people, like the people of the West in general, rejected liberal values at the dawn of the twentieth century. The dichotomy rending apart France today is not that between the far left and the far right, but between two far left movements, two movements united by their common enemy liberal democracy, and differing only with respect to the brand of socialism they promote. In the twenty first century, the 1940s Vichy-communist battle is being replayed by race Marxists and class Marxists selling their same poisons packaged in new vials. France Today. Look at France today and see communists led by France Unbowed and its allies and fascists led by the National Rally and its allies battle for the control of the nation, and see the forces of liberalism, led by Emmanuel Macron's Ensemble coalition, melt away under the blazing sun of extremism. See communists and fascists united in their support for a nation kept alive on the ventilators of public borrowing. See them united in their support for a public debt of 3.345 trillion euros, the third highest in Europe after Greece and Italy, equal to 114 percent of the GDP or 50,000 euros per citizen, to finance the welfare state. See them united in their support for government spending more money than it generates to finance a cradle to grave state cosset. See them united in their support for the majority's addiction to welfare programs. See them united in their support for a system of state pensions for all without respect to age. See them united in their support for a nation in which people can stop working at any time and receive a lifetime income paid for by those who work. See them united in their support for taxes on the producers to subsidize the nonproducers. See them united in their support for an endless expansion of government confiscation of wealth and its redistribution in the name of social responsibility: "French Prime Minister Francois Bayrou has lost a confidence vote of MPs, ending his nine months in office during a period of chaos in the country's parliament, the National Assembly. Bayrou, 74, was the fourth prime minister in two years under President Emmanuel Macron, whose second term is office has been overshadowed by political instability. The outgoing PM's minority government called for €44bn (£38bn) of budget cuts to tackle France's mounting public debt. It has now effectively collapsed. French President Emmanuel Macron took a gamble in June 2024. Faced with a bruising loss for his party in the European Parliament vote, he called a snap parliamentary election which he hoped would achieve 'a clear majority in serenity and harmony.' Instead, it resulted in a hung, divided parliament that has made it difficult for any prime minister to garner the necessary support to pass bills and the yearly budget. Macron appointed Michel Barnier last September but within three months the man who negotiated Brexit for the EU was out--the shortest period since France's postwar Fifth Republic began. Bayrou has now suffered the same fate, just under nine months since he came to office last December. He will formally resign on Tuesday. Some parties--chiefly on the far right and the far left--continue to clamor for an early presidential election. Macron, however, has always said he will not stand down before his term ends in 2027. Instead, he must now choose between appointing a fifth prime minister in less than two years, who will face the same intractable opposition--or call snap parliamentary elections and risk an even more hostile National Assembly. There are few good options for the president as the effects of his June 2024 gamble continue to reverberate. Bayrou's key issue was France's debt crisis, and what he said was the need to slash government spending to prevent a catastrophe for future generations. Simply put, France's government has for decades spent more money than it has generated. As a result, it has to borrow to cover its budget. The French government says that public debt stood at €3.345 trillion, or 114 percent of GDP, in early 2025. That is the third highest public debt in the eurozone after Greece and Italy, and equivalent to almost €50,000 per French citizen. Last year's budget deficit was 5.8% of GDP and this year's is not expected to be 5.4%. So public debt will continue to grow as borrowing covers the shortfall. France--like many developed nations--is facing the demographic headache of an ageing population--fewer workers being taxed and more people drawing the state pension. Bayrou is among those French politicians who want to slash the deficit by redefining generous social programs--such as state pensions. In his speech to parliament on Monday, Bayrou spoke of a country on 'life support' and addicted to spending. Two years ago France raised the pension age from 62 to 64 for those born in 1968 or afterwards, and Bayrou has warned that the sense that French workers can stop working during their early 60s is now out of date. However there is much opposition to further cuts. The government of Bayrou's predecessor collapsed in a confidence vote on the issue last December. Politicians on the left have called for tax rises, rather than budget cuts. France is probably heading for another period of doubt, drift and speculation. It is possible Macron will act quickly to appoint a new prime minister–it's certainly in the country's interest that he do so. But practicalities–and precedent–both suggest this could turn out to be a drawn out process. Macron has to find a name sufficiently unobjectionable to at least some of the parliamentary opposition that they won't automatically bring him or her down. The first two PMs in this benighted parliament–Barnier and Bayrou–took weeks to find. The third won't be any easier. In the meantime Bayrou will presumably stay on as caretaker. There is pressure from some quarters notably Marine Le Pen's National Rally–for a new dissolution of the National Assembly and parliamentary elections. But there are also strong voices saying it would be a waste of time, because a new vote would be unlikely to change much." (Why The French PM Had To Go And What Happens Next? by Hugh Schofield, Paul Kirby, Laura Gozzi and Graeme Baker). France Today. Look at France today and see communists and fascists united in their support for skyrocketing welfare payments and pensions. See them united in their support for a 365 day long paid national holiday. See them united in their support for national debt slavery enduring for generations to come to pay for the welfare state. See them united in their support for a campaign to block the operations of the nation, through sit ins, boycotts, strikes and riots, to protect the welfare state. See them united in their support for antibusiness policies and the destruction of French liberal Western existence: "France has been plunged into a new political crisis with the defeat of Prime Minister Francois Bayrou at a confidence vote in the National Assembly. Bayrou's fall came after he staked his government on an emergency confidence debate on the question of French debt. He spent the summer warning of the 'existential' threat to France if it did not start to tackle its €3.4 trillion (£2.9 trillion) liability. In a budget for 2026 he proposed to scrap two national holidays and freeze welfare payments and pensions, with the aim of saving €44 billion. But he was quickly disabused of any hope that his prophesies of financial doom would sway opponents. Lacking any majority in the National Assembly, Bayrou saw the left and hard right uniting against him--and his fate was sealed. In his speech beforehand, Bayrou made clear that he had his eyes set more on history rather than politics, telling MPs that it was future generations who would suffer if France lost its financial independence. 'Submission to debt is the same as submission to arms,' he said, warning that current debt levels meant 'plunging young people into slavery.' " (France In Fresh Political Crisis After MPs Oust Prime Minister by Hugh Schofield). France Today. National Police. National Revolution. Thus reads a 1941 propaganda poster for the recruitment of the National Police as part of the Vichy regime's National Revolution. The new fascist police fought Communist Party paramilitaries skilled at assassinations, ambushes, sabotage, spying and terror attacks for the control of the nation. In the twenty first century, these horsemen of the Apocalypse are riding again and have lowered the curtain on the story of France.
